Over 10% Here Obtain 'X' Cards For Gasoline

All Public Schools To Close Today As Officials Extend Registration Hours

More than 10 per cent of all gasoline ration cards issued here Tuesday were of the "X" classification — entitling the holder to an unlimited supply of fuel along with secrecy as to his identity—it was announced last night.

At the same time, officials prepared themselves for the wind-up of the registration here by ordering the 28 public schools where the cards are being issued to stay open from 10 a. m. to 8 p. m. today.

Registration figures for the first day of the signup disclosed that 49,722 cards, more than one-third of the number which it is estimated will be distributed in the District, were issued before the registration centers closed for the day, turning away between 1500 and 2000 irate motorists, many of whom had been in line for several hours.

Of the total number of cards issued, the heaviest registration was in the B-3 class, entitling the holders to 57 gallons of gas between Friday and July 1. According to the office of Lawson J. Cantrell, assistant superintendent of schools in charge of the enrollment, 17,873 of the B-3 cards were issued.

13,816 Get "A" Cards

The "A" cards, for nonessential drivers or those who travel less than 6 miles a day in connection with their work, were issued to 13,816 motorists; 6750 B-2 cards, for those who drive 10 to 14 miles daily and entitling them to 45 gallons between May 15 and July 1, were issued, and the B-1 cards, for drivers who travel 6 to 10 miles daily, went to 5561 motorists. Exactly 5857 "X" cards were issued.

An effort to secure from Cantrell's office the names of those who obtained the "X" cards brought the information that Office of Price Administration regulations specifically stipulate that "all records relating to the gasoline rationing program must be treated as confidential" unless otherwise directed by the OPA.

The OPA press section confirmed that the gasoline registration records are being handled confidentially as a matter of official policy, but was unable to supply any information as to why such a course had been adopted. The sugar registration records also were treated as "confidential matter," it was recalled, although the names of people securing certificates for the purchase of new cars, tires and tubes are made public.

Chait in Conference

It was suggested that the names might be held secret because to publicize them would, in some cases, possibly reveal information of a personal and confidential nature, but the press section was unable to say that this definitely

$42 Military Pay Likely Despite Efforts for $50

By the Associated Press

The House stuck to its $30 monthly scale for men in the lowest ranks in the Army-Navy pay rise bill yesterday, but indications were that the final figure would be $42.

With House approval, given with one dissenting vote, the measure now goes to conference to bring it into conformity with the rates approved by the Senate. The Senate bill calls for $42 and leaders said the plan was to adhere to that figure.

A roll call vote of 331 to 28 yesterday ratified Tuesday's acceptance of the $30 amendment. The measure then was passed with only Representative Disney (Democrat) of Oklahoma, voting against it.

First Lady Seeks Pay Delay Cause

An explanation for the long delay in paying new Federal employes, particularly in the new war agencies, has been requested of high Government officials by Mrs. Roosevelt, it was learned last night.

The new defense workers have been waiting as long as six weeks before obtaining their first pay checks, Mrs. Roosevelt has informed the officials. She pointed out cases of extreme hardship caused by the holding up of the salaries, and observed that some of the newcomers have been forced to seek aid from loan sharks. Legislators Sidestep Chiding

Full-Tank Criticism Rouses Congress' Ire

By Robert De Vore
Post Staff Writer

An Indiana Republican yesterday sought in the House to chide his colleagues for obtaining access to unlimited supplies of rationed gasoline, but he was cut short by a parliamentary maneuver in a chamber which a short time before resounded with angry retorts from criticism-stung devotees of the full Congressional gas tank.

"Evidently they (Congressmen) don't like free speech," was the comment of the Hoosier, Representative Wilson, in this latest development in the story of how the rationing of gasoline in 17 Eastern States and the District, starting tomorrow, was received on Capitol Hill. These were some of the other developments:

1. Price Administrator Leon Henderson issued a statement in which the approximately 250 troubled legislators who in the last two days have acquired "X" gasoline ration cards, were told they may exercise the right the cards give them to full gas tanks as long as their cars are used "substantially" all of the time in transacting business with Government agencies.

2. Senator Downey (Democrat), of California, announced that he would today ask the Senate for immediate consideration of a resolution declaring it to be the sense of that body that its members "shall collectively and individually waive any special rights, perquisites, or exemptions they may be accorded under the terms of any rationing order, and shall consider themselves bound by honor to the acceptance of the common rule."

3. Responding to reports of widespread issuance of the coveted "X" cards to Congressional secretaries, a Capitol official informed District rationing authorities that the secretaries should not be issued these cards and that the names of all those obtaining them should be recorded and the list sent to him.

Senate Unit Votes Rise in Farm Funds

Bill Reported Out With $32,213,178 Increase; House Economies Erased

The big Agriculture appropriation bill, target of the first successful House economy drive of the session, yesterday was reported to the Senate with a $32,213,178 cash increase and with many of the House economies wiped out.

As approved by the Senate Agriculture Committee, the measure carried $680,383,695 in cash, against the $648,170,517 voted by the House, and an 80-million-dollar increase in loan authorizations.

Administration's Request Cited

Senator Russell (Democrat), of Georgia, chairman of the Senate subcommittee, pointed to the Administration's request for more funds for the Farm Security Administration since the House raided FSA funds. He said the bill was still $13,070,434 under budget estimates, and $447,240,159 under farm appropriations for this year.

The Senate committee refused the President the free hand he asked in parity or even below parity sales of Government-owned farm stocks, but compromised the House ban on such sales. The compromise would permit limited distribution of some Government-owned surpluses at below parity prices, but bar any such sales of cotton.

Grain Market Protection

The House bill provides that deteriorated Government stocks of grain might be sold for feed and seed and making of industrial alcohol. The Senate Committee compromise specified that no more than 125 million bushels of wheat may be sold for feeding purposes. Members said their objective was to prevent wheat from being sold in sufficient quantities to depress the corn market.

The President repeatedly has asserted the Government's right to sell at less than the 110 per cent farm ceiling in the price act and has called on Congress to remove the 110 per cent requirement on farm prices generally, to aid the Administration in controlling inflation. Ready to yield slightly on surplus sales, farm bloc members were still adamant against general return to farm "parity."

Increases Opposed

The farm measure meanwhile faced a vigorous drive by the Senate economy bloc to eliminate on the Senate floor many of the committee increases, particularly in Farm Security Administration outlays.

After the House wielded the ax on FSA cash and loans, President Roosevelt wrote the Senate committee to provide an additional 12 million dollars cash and 105 million dollars loan authority to help low-income farmers produce food needed for the war effort. The

500 Naval Bids Called Phony By House Unit

Salesman Admits He Made 3 on Stationery Of Different Concerns

By Joseph H. Short
Washington Bureau of Chicago Sun

Testimony that 500 or 600 fictitious bids were submitted by subcontractors on a Philadelphia shipyard job yesterday was ordered submitted to the Justice Department for investigation.

Chairman Carl Vinson (Democrat) of Georgia of the House Naval Committee gave the order, with a view to learning whether Federal laws outlawing collusive bidding had been violated during rehabilitation of the Cramp plant at Philadelphia.

Representative Melvin J. Maas (Republican) of Minnesota also asked that the Federal Trade Commission look into "this absolutely reprehensible practice."

There was no evidence presented to the committee that the Government had been cheated and some of the subcontractors involved told the committee that the Government actually had gained financially by what one committee member described as a system of "phony" bids.

Goods Delivered Beforehand

The total of the amount involved in the fictitious bids submitted was about one million dollars, Vincent Burns, committee investigator, said.

The practice, a string of witnesses admitted, was for suppliers of materials to agree on a price with Charles F. Rohleder, the general contractor, and actually get the materials on the job before submitting "phony" bids on stationery borrowed from friendly firms in the same line.

Edmund M. Toland, committee counsel, charged the bids were "forged" and were made solely to comply with Federal regulations requiring submission of three competitive bids before any contract is let.

A typical case was brought out during questioning of R. R. Dewees, salesman of the Westinghouse Electrical Supply Co. at Philadelphia.

Dewees admitted that he had engaged in the "irregular" procedure of using the names and stationery of three concerns including his own, to submit fictitious bids after delivery and in some cases installation—of the materials.

Dewees and others contended that the purpose was to speed up re-

House Group Votes to Tax $500 Incomes

Married Exemption Lowered to $1200 In New Compromise

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

In a base broadening move to cover more than seven million new taxpayers into the Federal revenue structure, the House Ways and Means Committee yesterday dipped down to single individuals earning as low as $9.61 a week and married couples earning $23.08.

Treasury Triumphs

The committee voted 17 to 7 to slash income tax exemptions from $750 to $500 in the case of single persons and from $1500 to $1200 for married couples. The existing $400 credit for dependents was left undisturbed. The 10 per cent earned income credit was retained.

The drastic exemption slash was a moral victory for the Treasury which has battled for ten days to broaden the income tax base as a guard against inflation. But the committee departed from details of the Administration plan. The $500 exemption for single persons was $100 lower than that asked by the Treasury, and the $1200 allowed married couples was $200 higher. Ignored was the Treasury request for a $100 slash in the credit for dependents and for complete elimination of the earned income credit.

Sales Tax Drive Halted

Successful in the main in its drive to dip downward into low incomes for more taxes, the Administration faced more significant tests today and tomorrow on the question of surtax rates and revenue goals. The committee still must decide whether to start surtaxes on the first dollar of taxable income and range them from 12 to 86 per cent as the Treasury asks, or raise

Coroner Investigating Death Of Dr. Phillips From New Drug

Investigation of the death of the Very Rev. ZeBarney T. Phillips, 66, dean of Washington Cathedral and chaplain of the United States Senate, was instituted last night by the District coroner's office.

Although the coroner, Dr. A. Magruder MacDonald, refused "either to affirm or deny" an investigation, The Post learned that a post-mortem examination of the Episcopal clergymen's body was conducted at the Morgue last night.

Dr. MacDonald refused to make any statemepnt following the examination.

It is believed the coroner's action was prompted by facts set forth on a death certificate filed at the District Health Department. The immediate cause of death, according to the certificate, was "acute respiratory failure due to unusual reaction from narcotic drug—dilaudid, 1-32 grain."

Dilaudid is a comparatively new drug and its reaction is similar to that of morphine.

The certificate was prepared by Dr. Phillips' physician, who treated him Friday night at his home, 3508 Woodley Road Northwest. Dr. Phillips died about 8 p. m. Sunday and the certificate was filed at the District Building Tuesday.

Reds Fall Back on Kerch Front But Open Drive on Kharkov; AVG Blasts Indo-China Base

U. S., British Pilots Ring Up Toll Of 50 Jap Planes, In Wide Raids

By the United Press

New Delhi (Thursday), May 14.—American and British fliers, ranging over a 1,000-mile front from eastern Burma to French Indo-China, have blasted huge craters in runways and wrecked upwards of 50 aircraft in raids on three of Japan's principal airdromes in southern Asia, allied communiques revealed today.

An American Volunteer Group announcement at Chungking disclosed that the "Flying Tigers" had swept into French Indo-China for the first time in recent weeks to smash with both bombs and machine-gun fire at the main Japanese airdrome near Hanoi Tuesday afternoon.

American bombers attached to the United States Army struck at Myitkyina in northeast Burma, Japan's base for operations against China's Yunnan Province, and British planes bombed Akyab on the Burmese west coast, a potential base for an invasion of India.

15 Planes Destroyed

At Hanoi 15 Japanese planes on the ground, including bombers, a large transport and 2-seater and single-seater fighters were destroyed by fire and at least 25 others were damaged severely by bomb fragments or riddled with machine gun bullets, the A. V. G. communique said.

Two bombs hit the administration building directly, it added. One of the American pilots is missing, but all others returned to their base.

The Japanese controlled Saigon radio attributed the raid to six "Chinese" bombers and acknowledged that "some damage" was caused to the airdrome despite the fact that the raiders dropped only "the very lowest caliber bombs." Two of the raiding planes were shot down, the broadcast said.)

A communique from Maj. Gen. Lewis H. Brereton's headquarters said that the American bombers, in their fourth attack on invader bases in Burma in 10 days, set fire to parked aircraft and tore out huge craters on the runways at the Myiktyiana air port.

Long Voyage Ends

Roosevelt and Notable Group Welcome Quezon to Capital

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Staff Writer

Manuel Luis Quezon, President of the Philippine Commonwealth, who broke through the Japanese lines from embattled Corregidor in February, arrived yesterday to set up a headquarters for his government in Washington.

He and members of his family and officials of the Philippine government were met at Union Station by President Roosevelt and other high dignitaries of the Nation.

When President Quezon saw President Roosevelt waiting for him alongside a White House automobile, his dark eyes lighted up in recognition and he almost ran to meet him.

"Mr. President——," he cried.

"It's grand to see you," said President Roosevelt, pumping his hand.

The meeting, with its emotional atmosphere, afforded a commentary on America's unique record in the empire business. Forty-three years ago, Manuel Quezon joined with Aguinaldo in the insurrection against the United States. The insurrection failed and Quezon was imprisoned for six months. Eight years later, in the Taft Administration, he first came to Washington to begin his fight for Philippine independence, a fight that was won in the passage of the Tydings-McDuffie Act of 1934. This provided for the establishment of a Philippine Republic in 1946, following a 10-year period under a Commonwealth government.

When the Japanese, who share Nazi Germany's scorn for "pigmy states," launched their attack on the Philippines on December 8, President Quezon was at the hill resort of Baguio. He and members of his family and a few members of the Commonwealth government even-

U-Boats Sink 4 More Ships of United Nations

Strike in Mexican Gulf, Twice in Atlantic, Again in St. Lawrence

By the United Press

The United States Navy revealed yesterday that three United Nations merchantmen have been sunk by Axis submarines—one off Africa, one in the Gulf of Mexico and one within sight of an Atlantic Coast town—while the Canadian government disclosed that two vessels have been torpedoed in the St. Lawrence River instead of one announced on Tuesday.

[The Associated Press said 14 crew members from the two ships sunk in the St. Lawrence were reported dead or missing.—Editor's Note.]

Two Ships Are American

Sinkings revealed at Washington and Ottawa brought to around 185 the cargo ship losses revealed in this Nation and Canada since the war began. Two of the latest victims of U-boat warfare were American vessels.

Three fishing boats brought 22 of the 37-man crew of a medium-sized American freighter ashore after their vessel was torpedoed off the Atlantic Coast in sight of housewives in a beach town. The survivors revealed at West Palm Beach, Fla., that their vessel sank within 60 seconds, the lifeboats still in their davits. Two men—Fourth Mate Dewer MacDonough, New York, and Chief Steward Louis Ruiz, Brooklyn, were killed and 13 others

Vichy Rejects Martinique Ship Demand

Offers to Renew Pledge That Axis Will Not Get French Warships

By Ralph Heinzen
United Press Staff Writer

Vichy, May 13.—France is ready to renew her pledge that no French warship will be used by the Axis against the Allies, and to immobilize the three warships at Martinique, but she refuses to hand over the tankers and merchant ships there to the United States, the Vichy government informed Washington in a formal note today.

Delivery of merchant shipping tied up at the French Caribbean island—estimated at 140,000 tons—would violate French commitments under the 1940 armistice convention not to surrender shipping to enemies of the Axis, the note said.

The German-controlled Paris Matin predicted today that the ships would be scuttled if the United States tried to take them over by force.

"Grave Questions" Raised

Before the contents of the note were learned, the foreign office had announced in a communique that a message had been sent to Washington and commented that the United States "demands" concerning Martinique had raised "grave questions."

The note, which took up three pages, referred to the American approach to Admiral Georges Robert, high commissioner for Martinique and other French possessions in the Caribbean, for a new arrangement as "an extra-diplomatic offensive."

New Parleys Offered

It insisted that modification of the satisfactory accord regarding Martinique already in force was not justified simply because of the cabinet change in Vichy. Pierre Laval, new chief of government, has given American Ambassador Admiral William D. Leahy, now on his way to Washington, and Charge d'Affaires S. Pinckney Tuck, assurance that France never will take the initiative to provoke a rupture

Russians Deny Nazi Report of Decisive Victory, Claim Heavy Toll

By the United Press

Moscow (Thursday), May 14.—Russian defenders of the Kerch Peninsula have fallen back to new positions under a terrific onslaught by German land, sea and air forces, retreating in good order and inflicting "enormous" losses on the advancing enemy, the Red army reported today.

While acknowledging the withdrawal in the face of superior Axis power, the Soviet high command nevertheless bluntly described as a lie the claim by the Germans that the Kerch battle had ended in their favor with a great number of prisoners, tanks and guns captured.

While the Crimean battle still blazed in full fury yesterday, Timoshenko's army of the Ukraine loosed a powerful offensive aimed at Kharkov, hub of the upper Donets industrial basin, and advanced successfully, an early morning communique revealed.

Designed to Block Drive

For months Timoshenko's men had been hammering at the approaches to Kharkov, and the determined new offensive appeared to be designed to knock out that foremost enemy base of the entire southern front before the Germans can make use of it for a Ukrainian drive.

[A possibility that a third important sector of the front may be opened by the Germans soon, perhaps as part of a general offensive, was seen in a brief Moscow radio report that the huge total of 229 German transport planes and 37 fighters were destroyed in the last few days in the region about Staraya Russa, south of Leningrad and northwest of Moscow, long a bitterly-contested area, an Associated Press dispatch said.

[The presence of so many German transport planes indicated a further Nazi attempt to bolster the reportedly trapped sixteenth German army south of Lake Ilmen. The Nazi recently claimed they had cut a ground corridor through to that army.]

32 Nazi Tanks Smashed

Admission of the Red Army retreat from the primary barricade across the 18-mile neck of the Kerch Peninsula was the first Soviet report indicating a trend in the bloody battle rounding out its

Army Pilot Fatally Hurt in Crash Near Bolling Field

Second Lieut. James Kriss, about 25, of Minneapolis, Minn., was fatally injured last night when the motor on his light single-seat pursuit ship failed as he was taking off from Bolling Field and sent the craft plunging down into the Shepherd Parkway section just below the crest of the ridge which rises above the Army air field to the east.

The ship fell in a wooded area, on the west side of the 4000 block of Second Street Southwest, apparently after the pilot had used the last strength of his faltering motor to bank the plane and avoid crashing into nearby homes.

The accident happened at 8:15 and Kriss died shortly after he had been admitted to Casualty Hospital at 9 p. m. He was pronounced dead by First Lieut. Alvin Stander, a flight surgeon who was coming into Bolling for a landing and witnessed the crash.

Lieut. Stander immediately rushed over to the scene of the mishap after he had landed and rode with Kriss, in the ambulance of Rescue Squad No. 1, to the hospital. His death was attributed to a severe skull fracture. His next of kin, his father, was listed as Mier Kriss, 1302 East Franklin Avenue, Minneapolis. Kriss had been stationed at Bolling Field for about three months, it was stated.

Camp Polk, La., May 13.—They have just turned in the neatest trick of the year down here among the blackened stumps of what once were the mighty pine forests of Central Louisiana.

With the equipment of one armored division they have trained two, doubling up on everything, tanks, trucks, weapons, kitchens and that most precious thing of all: time. In 13 weeks they have created a new armored division alongside an old one, both using the same equipment, the same ground and the same experience in their training.

And a few days ago they performed a major operation here; at a brief ceremony on the Camp Polk parade they split a mass of 27,000 men down the middle and came out with two armored divisions. The operation was practically painless.

ANDREWS

"This formation," they were told by Maj. Gen. Alvan C. Gillem, jr., commanding the Second Armored Corps, who conceived and carried out the radically new idea, "marks the culmination of a training period which is unique in our service. I do not believe that it has been previously attempted . . . This has been accomplished because there was a will and a desire on the part of all of you to help."

No one needs to be told the vital need in today's warfare for the swift, heavy armored columns which have torn their way through vaunted defenses all across the face of Europe. This country's need was especially great; until the battle of France, development of its armored forces had been meager indeed.

When Hitler's blitzkriegs turned the spotlight on armored strength, America had practically nothing out of which to build armored divisions. Excellent tanks and weapons were designed and put into production and, whatever our own needs, a large part of them had to be put into the hands of troops of other nations who already were face to face with Hitler's armored might. Upon what was left to us we began building an armored force of Facts and figures disclosing the amazing increase in America's war production since the entry of the United States into the war on December 7 were given yesterday by William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, to its executive council.

The significance of Green's statement is enhanced by the fact that they were expressly authorized by the War Production Board and other Government agencies from which he obtained his data. Outstanding among his disclosures were:

1. Airplanes—The delivery rate of Flying Fortresses has more than doubled since Pearl Harbor. The general production rate of all types of combat planes has jumped more than 50 per cent in four months and more planes are now being produced each month than in the entire year 1939, when the program of military aircraft got under way.

2. Tanks—America is now exceeding the Axis powers in the production of tanks, and tank production this year has already surpassed the output for the entire year of 1941.

3. Ships—Despite shortages in materials, tremendous progress has

Giraud Seeks Liberation Of 500,000

London, May 13 (AP).—Reuters news agency reported today in a dispatch datelined "On the German frontier" that Gen. Henri Honore Giraud, French military leader who escaped from the strong German Koenigstein fortress, has offered to return there in exchange for release of 500,000 French prisoners-of-war.

Giraud's offer was said to have been made to Gen. Otto von Stuelpnagel, German military administrator for Occupied France, in a meeting arranged at the instigation of French chief of government Pierre Laval.

Gen. von Stuelpnagel was astonished, the sources of this story said, and ended the conversation "abruptly."

London, May 13 (INS).—The largest Canadian overseas contingent in history has arrived safely in Britain after a trip across the Atlantic, it was officially announced tonight.

All branches and services were represented, including infantry, artillery, medical and ordnance. The Canadians also brought hundreds of thoroughly trained airmen.

It also was announced that fresh New Zealand forces, including naval, air and forestry units, had arrived in England.

London, May 13 (AP).—The Rome radio asserted today that a bomb splinter had pierced the left arm of Lord Gort, new Governor and commander in chief of Malta, as he arrived at his post on the Mediterranean island last week.

New York, May 13 (AP).—Scenic pictures taken outside the United States by camera fans are wanted by the Government, says Roy W. Winton, managing director of the Amateur Cinema League.

Winton said today that by special authorization the league had distributed 60,000 questionnaires through photographic dealers and camera clubs throughout the Nation, requesting that all personally made motion picture footage, still photos and transparencies be made available to Federal authorities.

Winton said he could not reveal the sources of the authorization. He said all amateurs were requested to cooperate, regardless of whether or not they belonged to the league, and that the size of the pictures made no difference, nor did their quality.

U.S. Needs 13,500 Dentists

New York, May 13 (AP).—The Army and Navy needs 13,500 dentists, a Government official said today, and they must be drawn immediately from the 71,500 dentists now practicing in the Nation.

"The present ratio in the Army of three dentists to 2000 men will probably be changed to one to every 500 men," said Comdr. C. American Airmen Sink Enemy Ship, Destroy Many Planes

BULLETIN.

Gen. MacArthur's Headquarters, Melbourne (Thursday), May 14 (U.P.).—American and Australian long-range bombers, lashing at Ambon (Amboina Island) and Babaul at opposite ends of a 1700-mile invasion arc above Australia, sank a 3000-ton ship, scored direct hits on two others and damaged or destroyed at least 15 bombers Wednesday, it was announced today.

By the United Press

Melbourne, May 13.—A new Japanese invasion fleet was believed tonight to be assembling northeast of Australia for another southward drive, which military experts said must be attempted soon to reduce Allied air assaults on present enemy island bases.

Activities of Japanese ships and war planes at Rabaul, on New Britain Island, and at Lae, on the north New Guinea coast, as reported by American and Australian reconnaissance fliers, indicated that enemy reinforcements were arriving in the area steadily, according to war dispatches.

Punishing Blows

The belief here was that the Japanese could not long stand the heavy blows of the Allied air force and must strike soon or get out of the northeastern invasion area.

Dispatches from advanced Allied bases indicated that last week's Coral Sea battle, in which 21 enemy ships were sunk or damaged, might only have disrupted temporarily the Japanese drive, believed aimed either at Australia itself or the Free French island of New Caledonia, garrisoned by American troops and protector of the supply line to this subcontinent.

The main Japanese striking force was scattered by the Allied naval victory but its key units were believed virtually intact and dispersed throughout the area waiting for ships to replace those lost last week.

Weather Halts Attack

For the first time since the Coral Sea battle began, on May 4, bad weather interrupted offensive activity of the Allied air force yesterday, according to a brief communique issued by Gen. Douglas MacArthur's headquarters.

Lieut. Gen. Sir Thomas Blamey of Australia, head of the Allied ground forces under MacArthur, said in a speech broadcast tonight to all his men throughout the Southwest Pacific that "we have the strength to defeat this enemy and we must and we will."

against a reinforced Japanese penetration of their soil while isloted, exhausted Chinese and British forces held stubbornly to the last few bits of Burma.

After suffering a temporary but bloody setback, the Japanese advance guard on the Burma Road was reported in a Chinese communique to have penetrated at least 50 miles inside China's backyard at Lungling and to have pushed on towards Paoshan, 50 miles deeper inside Yunnan Province. The major objective of this drive supposedly is Kunming, capital of the province, and China terminus of the true Burma Road.

R. A. F. Bombs Jap Base

A Chungking spokesman said, however, that the Japanese in the Lungling area had made no progress since yesterday, and expressed the opinion that they might not try to advance farther because of the heavy casualties they have suffered in Yunnan Province.

While Chiang's seasoned troops fought this new incursion other by-passed units of U. S. General Stilwell's Chinese expeditionary force were slashing at the enemy's thinly guarded communication lines in northern Burma.

The Chinese high command said Chinese units had disrupted Japanese communications between the Mandalay-Lashio area and Bhamo and Myitkyina to the north.

Japs Open New Front

Chungking also disclosed that the Japanese had opened up a new front by advancing northward up the Mekong River from Thailand into the Burma-Thailand-French Indo-China border region and have occupied the town of Hongluk. Then they pressed on toward Mongko, where the Chinese engaged them.

The communique reported also that another Japanese column was battling the Chinese at Kongkum on the Salween River, but these actions were said to have taken place late last week.

The Berlin radio reported from Tokyo meantime that three Chungking divisions had been annihilated in Burma and named them as the Fifty-eighth, Eightieth and 200th.

Just Guerillas, Japs Say

The remnants still fighting in Burma were described by the Japanese as guerillas. Tokyo claimed they were trapped by the destruction of a bridge over the Salween River.

While British land units, trying to extricate themselves from Burma, withdrew closer to the Assam border, a military spokesman at New Delhi discounted Japanese reports of success in encircling British remnants.

He said that at least part of Lieut. Gen. Harold Alexander's troops already were at Shwegyin, 140 miles above Mandalay before the Japanese pursuit fully developed.

Nazis Hint 'Surprise Weapon' Is Shell to Deafen Over Big Area

By the Associated Press

Bern, Switzerland, May 13.—An explanation of the German foreign office, as quoted here by the Neue Zuercher Zeitung, indicated today that Germany's "surprise weapon" in the Kerch offensive probably is a new type shell which detonates with such intensity as to deafen and immobolize persons over a wide area and which generates gas as a by-product.

The Germans have announced that they would not use gas as a weapon of attack but this version indicated that they may consider gas freed in the bursting of high explosive shells a different matter.

The German Foreign Office explanation as quoted by the Swiss paper said "naturally there are poisonous gases which escape when modern explosives are detonated, but that does not mean chemical battle material."

Foreign military experts here concluded that the shells probably were an improved version of those reported to have been used in the Belgian campaign, the chief effect of which was temporarily to stupefy large numbers of combatants.

The Zurich newspaper correspondent said the Germans claimed their new weapon had taken the Russians by surprise.

Minesweeper Chief Awarded Navy Gold Star

The Navy yesterday awarded a Gold Star—the equivalent of a second Navy Cross—to a ship's commander who is now presumed to be a prisoner of the Japs.

He is Lieut. Comdr. Richard E. Hawes of Thomson, Ga., of the U. S. S. Pigeon, a combination minesweeper and submarine rescue craft which did yeoman service in Manila Bay through the five-month Battle of Luzon.

Hawes, a submarine expert, was first pronounced a hero in the '20s—winning the Navy Cross and promotion from boatswain to ensign by special act of Congress for submarine rescue work during the S-51 and S-4 disasters.

He was similarly rewarded yesterday "for his courageous, timely and strenuous action under heavy enemy attack" in Manila Bay, December 10, when his little ship saved a disabled American submarine.

The Pigeon was at Cavite navy yard when the enemy bombers came over and put out into the bay so that it could maneuver to dodge the bombs. A damaged submarine, however, was in danger of total destruction, and Hawes put back to attempt to tow it clear.

A towing line was attached to the sub and the Pigeon was attempting to pull it clear of a mud bank, when a nearby oil tank exploded, sending sheets of flame over two vessels. The paint of the rescue craft was blistered, but it managed to get to safety with the sub.

Then Commander Hawes put back into the harbor and towed two lighters to sea, one of them aflame. During the attack, the Pigeon's machine guns were firing on the raiders and one enemy plane was hit.

Hawes, who served at the diving school at the Navy Yard here in 1932-33, had high praise for the crew of his vessel during the Cavite air raid.

"It is not believed that any crew will ever face more terrifying conditions than did the crew of the Pigeon," he reported. "During the entire operation, not a single man flinched or hesitated in carrying out his own mission. Leadership and disregard for their own safety displayed by petty officers was an inspiration to entire ship's company."

After the December 10 attack, the Pidgeon played an important thiugh unspectacular part in the campaign, repairing damaged craft, replenishing their supplies, feeding their crews, restocking them with ammunition and generally serving as a "mother ship" for submarines, torpedo boats and other ships. Once it made underwater repairs on a sub at night.

During the first air raid on Corregidor, it is reported, the 50-caliber machine guns of the Pigeon shot down three twin-motor Jap bombers.

The little vessel was finally sunk in the final heavy bombardment of Corregidor. In reporting the loss of the craft, the Navy declared that so far as is known there were no casualties aboard her.

Therefore, naval officials believe that Commander Hawes and his brave crew were among those who fought on Corregidor to the last and are now Japanese prisoners of war.

R. A. F. Shoots Down 15 Nazi Planes in Africa

By the Associated Press

Cairo, May 13.—The North African theater sprang into brief prominence again today with an R. A. F. announcement that British fighters had shot down 13 German Junker planes of the troop-carrying type, along with two escorting German Messerschmitt craft.

This was accomplished yesterday, at the loss of a single British plane, in the interception of an enemy formation of unstated size, and it was added that aside from the 15 enemy planes known to have been destroyed others probably were knocked out.

In which direction the Nazi formation was flying was not mentioned.

Informed London quarters declared a belief that the Junkers were carrying reinforcements of men or material from Crete to the Axis armies in Libya, or were returning from such a trip.

Strong concentrations of German troops, and particularly airborne and glider specialists, have long been noted about Crete and the Greek islands generally, and in certain well-posted allied quarters a Nazi attack eastward from Crete on British-owned Cyprus—as a means of getting at Syria—has been expected.

Such a plot is believed by these sources to explain the persistent Axis air attacks, at the cost of great plane casualties, on the British fortified Mediterranean island of Malta.

Two more Axis planes were officially reported destroyed and two were damaged today over Malta, bringing the toll of destroyed or crippled raiders to 128 since Saturday.

A few bombers escorted by German fighters struck at Malta's airdromes, while 4 miles to the northwest on tiny Gozo Island four Messerschmitts machine-gunned the streets of Victoria, the capital.

The planes flew so low that residents could see the pilots who opened their cockpits and threw grenades into the streets.

U. S. to Build 'More Than 100' New Submarines

By the Associated Press

Construction of 200,000 additional tons of submarines in a move to beat the Axis at its own game was authorized yesterday by a bill signed into law by President Roosevelt.

Just how many more submarines the measure will add to the Nation's expanding fleet is a military secret, but Chairman Vinson (Democrat) of Georgia, of the House Naval Affairs Committee, has said that it would provide for "more than 100."

Eight Marylanders Killed in Philippines

Three From Nearby: Lieut. O. G. King, Sergt. H. H. Harris, Pvt. A. C. Mollohan

An official War Department announcement yesterday listed the names of eight Marylanders, three of them from nearby areas, who were killed in action or died of wounds suffered in the Philippine fighting.

Those from nearby counties were Lieut. Olin G. King, Silver Spring; Sergt. Howell H. Harris, jr., Capitol Heights, and Private Alvey C. Mollohan, Brentwood.

Lieutenant King, whose heroism in the fighting on Bataan won him the Distinguished Service Cross, awarded posthumously, was a reserve officer who was called into active service and sent to the Philippines last July. He was the father of a son whom he never saw. The child, Wayne Olin, jr., was born last August 3.

King Was G. W. Law Graduate

Graduated in 1940 from George Washington University school of law, Lieut. King was later employed in the War Department. His wife, the former Miss Dora Lee Walsh, of near Laurel, Md., is staying with a sister at 8116 Hartford Avenue, Silver Spring. She was notified April 23 that her husband had been "killed in battle defending his country," January 23, but no details were given.

Besides his wife and son, Lieut. King leaves his parents, Dr. and Mrs. Jonathan Olin King, of Salt Lake City; two sisters, Miss Edith King, Ogden, Utah, and Mrs. June Taylor, Salt Lake City.

Sergeant Harris, a veteran of 21 years' service in the Army, was killed January 27 while serving as a mechanic with the Twentieth Pursuit Squadron in the Philippines, according to word received by the family.

He was born at Congress Heights in the District, but spent most of his youth in Capitol Heights and in Arlington County, Va. He enlisted at the age of 18 and was serving his third tour of foreign duty.

Surviving Sergeant Harris are his father, Howell H. Harris, sr., 245 Eighth Street Southeast; two brothers, Theodore Harris, 2606 Thirty-sixth Street Northwest, and Charles Harris, Capitol Heights; five sisters, Miss Sarah Harris of Washington, and Mrs. W. G. Bixler, Mrs. A. G. Gower, Mrs. L. S. Croft and Mrs. C. J. McGrew, all of Arlington, Va.

Mollohan Was Pilot

Private Mollohan, a pilot, was wounded early in February while fighting with the Third Pursuit Squadron in the Philippines. He died of his wounds later in the month after being evacuated to Australia.

Mollohan enlisted in the Army Air Corps in 1934 shortly after graduating from the Mount Rainier High School and was sent to Hawaii. In 1936 he was honorably discharged and became a test pilot for a California aircraft company. He reenlisted in 1938 and was sent to Nichols Field, Manila, where he was stationed when the Japanese attacked.

Surviving are his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Menton Mollohan, of 3502 Upshur Street, Brentwood, and a brother, Harold, who is in the Navy.

Cumberland Man Listed

Pvt. Paul C. Gordon of Cumberland, also was listed among the casualties. He lost his life March 14 at Corregidor, according to word received by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Walter A. Gordon of 959 Glenwood Street, Cumberland. Private Gordon has been employed at the N. & G. Taylor tin mills before enlisting six years ago.

Other Maryland casualties listed by the War Department were:

Capt. Wilbur Milton and Pvt. Leslie D. Meyers, both of Baltimore; Pvt. Norman E. Lawson of Crisfield, and Pvt. Lionel L. Lowe of Linthicum.

Zipper Lips, Roosevelt Tells War Council

By Michael Chinigo

International News Service Staff Writer

President Roosevelt, using the Pacific War Council as the communicating medium, yesterday sternly warned the governments and peoples of all the United Nations against giving valuable information to the enemy by "loose talk."

Citing British Prime Minister Churchill's Sunday speech disclosure that "speculation" almost gave away Britain's occupation of Madagascar as a "striking example," the Chief Executive was quoted by Canadian Minister Leighton McCarthy to have given council members "quite a lecture on the urgency of keeping tight lips — particularly when military operations are in progress."

The effect of the President's warning was immediate. Participants in yesterday's session beyond disclosing that production figures had been studied and that "they are steadily mounting in gratifying fashion," left the White House in agreement that spokesmen for the United Nations henceforth should be extremely cautious in public statements.

"We all believe," China's Foreign Minister T. V. Soong declared, "that there is danger of too much loose talk that will be giving away information of value to the enemy.

"Everyone is so much interested in what is going on that there is a lot—too much—speculation.

"Such speculation, without any particular basic knowledge, is apt to be very dangerous."

British Ambassador Lord Halifax took particular care to explain that "discussions for discretion" in yesterday's council session were not based on complaints against any particular government, individual or newspaper.

"The United Nations are many," he said, "and their peoples are naturally anxious to know what is going on.

"Speculation of the type we have in mind results from a desire to satisfy this desire for information. It is dangerous because it is not based on fact. It is dangerous when it attempts to look into what possible military moves may be in sight."

Russians Fall Back in Crimea; 2 Million Nazis Mass in Ukraine

sixth day. Earlier unofficial advices said the Caucasian army under Gen. D. T. Kozlov was fighting stubbornly with the support of the Soviet Black Sea fleet and the Russian air force, and the issue was far from decided.

The extent of the withdrawal from the original Red Army positions northeast of Feodosiya was left obscure. But the assertion that it was carried out in good order implied that the Soviet line across the Crimean route to the Caucasus was intact.

The ferocity of the battle was reflected in the announcement that on Tuesday 43 German planes were destroyed and 17 Russian planes lost, shooting the enemy losses for three days up to 145.

The Russian air force on Tuesday destroyed or damaged 32 German tanks, 120 military trucks carrying troops and supplies, and eight anti-aircraft machine gun posts, besides demolishing a railway train and partly wiping out up to a regiment of German infantry.

Other Soviet planes blasting at German communication lines were credited with destroying 100 more trucks moving men and materials up to the front, 105 loaded carts, 40 field and antiaircraft guns, and 10 trench mortars.

The late communique said a Soviet warship operating in the Barents Sea on the Arctic supply route from the United States and Great Britain sank an enemy transport of 12,000 tons.

"Elsewhere on the front nothing of significance was reported," it said.

Unofficial Soviet reports, however, told of formidable hostilities in virtually every main sector of the front, particularly in the Ukraine where invasion and defense armies struggled for positions vital to the big-scale campaigning which appeared to be gaining momentum already.

The Soviet radio reported that in the Bryansk sector southwest of Moscow a band of 250 Germans tried to force a crossing of a strategic river under the fire of Soviet artillery, mortars and machine guns which sent them scrambling back in disorder.

On the Leningrad front, the communique said one day of battle resulted in the occupation of 20 fortified dugouts, annihilation of 400 Germans and capture of two tanks.

For the first time it was revealed that German naval units—presumably submarines and gunboats stealing eastward through the Black Sea—were supporting the Axis aeroland offensive. Pitted against them was the powerful Russian Black Sea fleet backing up the defenders of eastern Crimea.

U. S. Tanks in Action

The Russians, armed with the deadliest weapons of modern warfare, including triple-turret American tanks, were inflicting terrific German casualties according to Soviet dispatches.

2 Million Nazis Mass in Ukraine

By the Associated Press

London, May 13.—Germany's continuing attack on the Crimean Kerch Peninsula took on the form tonight of the opening thrust in a coming Nazi offensive from at least three points toward the oil wealth of the Caucasus, an offensive backed by two million of Hitler's best combat troops now reported massed in the Ukraine.

Informed London sources, although discounting German claims of having broken the Russian lines, captured 40,000 prisoners and "decided" the battle of the isthmus in an assault employing 2000 dive bombers, said the Germans now could be expected to smash at Rostov from Taganrog, above the Sea of Azov, and to attack in force southeast from Kharkov.

In late broadcasts the Germans claimed they already had reached the Sea of Azov in a northeasterly penetration of Russian Crimean defenses, cut Red army communications from the rear, destroyed or damaged a Soviet evacuation fleet and destroyed 183 Red planes in combat.

As for Kerch itself, where German troops under Gen. Fritz Erich von Mannstein have been smashing for five days at the Russian army of Lieut. Gen. D. T. Kozlov, competent London informants said "the key to the situation is in the air."

"If the Germans can control the air they can keep the Russian Black Sea fleet away, smash resistance on the peninsula and prepare to jump the strait to take the Caucasus defenses of Rostov from the rear," one source said.

But, he added, if the Russians could maintain air parity there was little likelihood of outstanding German success even if Kerch at the eastern end of the peninsula were taken, for then the Germans would not be able to negotiate the few miles across the strait.

The German high command said the battle was "concluded" with destruction of enemy forces encircled and overrun and that "remnants" of the Russian peninsular force were being pursued toward the tip of the isthmus.

In addition to more than 40,000 prisoners, the Germans claimed the capture or destruction of 197 armored cars, 598 guns and 260 aircraft. German commentators broadcast that the Germans were now well beyond Parpatsch, in the neck of the Kerch Isthmus at its narrowest point, that German artillery had broken the first Soviet defense lines and that infantry was being thrown into the assault.

The Russian defenses near Parpatsch were described as wide, deep antitank trenches, with several lines of strong fortifications—which, in the words of German propagandists, were "razed to the ground" by waves of dive bombers.

All these claims were confidently regarded here as greatly exaggerated, for they were reminiscent of the unfounded "annihilation" announcements which Hitler's headquarters broadcast to the world last autumn, just before the tide of battle turned in favor of the Red army.

4 United Nations Ships Sunk by Subs

The careful preparation of First Mate C. L. Clark, Mill Valley, Calif., was praised by other survivors for saving their lives. They said Clark had made liferafts from bits of planking and discarded oil drums several days before the sinking.

"I don't know whether it was a premonition or not," Clark said. "But I thought that instead of throwing away those old drums, we might put them to a practical use."

Clark said that none of the men had time to jump overboard, and "about the time we decided to jump, we were waist-deep in the water and the next second we were swimming like hell to get away from the suction of the ship."

Since May 4, the Navy has announced 13 sinkings from which survivors have landed at Florida ports. The latest one was witnessed by Mrs. Pat Enright, a resident of the beach town near where the ship was sunk. She said a neighbor saw puffs of smoke above the ship, called her, and just as she rushed out, two columns of water broke over the ship.

"It was all over in a second," said Mrs. Enright.

A small Norwegian freighter was torpedoed and sunk in the Gulf of Mexico May 8, the third vessel sunk in a 48-hour period in those waters. Previously the Navy announced loss of a small freighter and a medium merchantman in those waters, May 6.

At New Orleans, survivors of the crew, including 21 Norwegians, a Finn, a Swede, a Spaniard, a Dutchman and an American, said two men died in the explosion.

The submarine stayed near the scene for about an hour after the sinking at 7:40 a. m., survivors said, and last was seen heading west after surfacing 80 feet from one of the lifeboats to ask the name of the vessel and its cargo.

"It was light gray," one of the crew said in describing the submarine. "It had new paint and there were no markings or camouflage."

Crew members said they refused to answer questioning by the submarine commander, who spoke with a heavy German accent.

Speculation on Number Refused

The Navy declined comment on the possible number of submarines operating in the Gulf. Survivors of a previous sinking had described the U-boat which attacked them as "large and gray-green."

At Ottawa, Navy Minister Angus MacDonald, who 24 hours earlier had told of the torpedoing of a United Nations vessel in the St. Lawrence River, announced to the Canadian Commons Wednesday that a second ship had been sunk "in the same general locality and at the same general time."

Survivors Land at Norfolk

The torpedoing of a medium-sized American merchant ship off the west coast of Africa early in April in which nine members of a 65-man crew were killed, was disclosed after survivors landed at Norfolk, Va.

The survivors—eight members of the vessel's naval gun crew, 36 African crewmen and a number of United States missionaries and other Americans from Africa—were brought to this country aboard a passenger ship that rescued them soon after the torpedo struck. A tenth member of the crew died on the way into port.

Capt. Turlief G. Selness, of Brooklyn, N. Y., said the rescue ship took all of the men aboard immediately after the torpedo struck and remained in the vicinity while Selness made up a boarding party to attempt to salvage the stricken vessel. Efforts to tow the craft into a nearby port failed, he said, and the crew was ordered to abandon her.

Justice Lets Files Case Jury Off To Get Gas Cards

Legal technicalities and gas rationing caused a temporary halt yesterday in the District Court trial of five persons charged with stealing Civil Service Commission records.

Justice James W. Morris excused the jury at noon "to get along with the business of obtaining gas rationing cards" while counsel continued legal arguments which began Monday noon.

The arguments centered around admissibility of certain portions of statements made by defendants to agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation shortly after the alleged theft was discovered in January, 1941. The trial is scheduled to resume at 10 a. m. today with the reading of 12 statements in which deletions are to be agreed upon by counsel.

Pope Sees No Sign Of an Early Peace

Pontiff Addresses World, Deplores Non-Christian Tactics

By the Associated Press

Vatican City (From Vatican Broadcasts), May 13.—Pope Pius XII appealed to the world's leaders today to conclude a peace "on principles of justice and moderation even if it does not seem to correspond to aspirations," but he acknowledged that "there is no immediate hope of peace."

He addressed his peace appeal "with impartiality to all belligerents and with equal affection for all sections of all peoples." But in an earlier section of his address the Pope attacked the anti-Christian methods of the leaders of "some countries" who are "bent on replacing right by force."

The Pontiff, speaking on the twenty-fifth anniversary of his consecration as a bishop and on the eve of the Feast of the Ascension, was addressing the world by radio. He spoke, he said, while "people are living in painful anxiety, awaiting imminent military operations" and anticipating "the menace of greater destructive weapons."

"Little Probability of Success"

But, he said, "we will know how in the state of things today there would be little probability of success in formulating detailed proposals for a just and honorable peace."

"While one side bases its hopes on results achieved," he observed, "the other side bases its hopes on the outcome of future events."

In his remarks attacking the foes of Christianity the Pope said:

"Today in some countries those in authority bent on replacing right by force trump up against Christians the same infringements of law which the Caesars of the first century pretended to have found in Peter and Paul and a countless line of innocent victims who are now effulgent with a halo of virtues.

"The crime trumped up against Christians is always the same—their unfaltering loyalty to the King of Kings and the Lord of Lords."

The pontiff opened his remarks on peace by recalling that he always had worked for peace.

"But now" he said, "that people are living in painful anxiety, awaiting imminent military operations, we take the opportunity offered us by today's anniversary to pronounce once again a word of peace. . . .

Destruction Accumulates

"Whlie there is no immediate hope of peace, the destruction caused by war is forever accumulating. We make this appeal today with greater insistence in view of the menace of greater destructive weapons.

"The present political situation, with its ravages of moral and material values, with cruelty of unprecedented violence, will hardly allow of such an offer being accepted . . .

"There certainly exists a social solution so that the wealth of nations can by public administration be distributed in such a way as to promote life and not death. . . .

"We now appeal to the heads of nations to secure a future for their nations, to purify their consciences before God and to restore the happiness of family life.

"We give them warm advice to conclude peace on principles of justice and moderation even if it does not seem to correspond to aspirations. . . .

"A new world must be constructed—a world of brotherhood, so help us God."

A trend toward lighter colors, with emphasis on the natural and medium tan tones, is expected to continue this season.

U. S. to Purchase Yugoslav Tires In Warehouse

Dr. Constantine Fotich, Yugoslav Minister in Washington, said yesterday that at last a United States war agency had agreed to buy from him 11,000 tires which had been frozen by a Government order in a New York warehouse.

The Minister was unwilling to discuss what agency had agreed to take this burden off his hands, or go into details concerning the financial transaction.

According to one report, the War Production Board has undertaken to take the tires off the Yugoslav Minister's hands for the sum of $200,000. Dr. Fotich then would be stuck for only about $16,000, representing storage charges.

CAA Approves Grant For Virginia Air Field

By the Associated Press

The Civil Aeronautics Administration announced yesterday it had approved allocation of $660,000 for an air field at West Point, Va., contingent upon the locality furnishing a site.

West Point, Va., May 13 (AP).—Dr. M. H. Harris, Mayor of West Point, said today a committee of city council was studying the matter of obtaining a site of some 400 acres for a CAA-approved air field here.

W. P. DeShazo is chairman of the committee, which Mayor Harris said he thought would be able to report in the near future.

President Set To Win War Before 1944

By Cecil B. Dickson
Washington Bureau of Chicago Sun

President Roosevelt is determined to bring World War II to a successful conclusion by the spring of 1944, if not sooner.

This definite impression has been given Congressional leaders and high Government officials.

The new setup in the Government's tempo to convert the entire Nation to war effort, was cited yesterday by those in charge of military, naval, financial and man power affairs as justification for their conclusions.

They cite:

New war plans call for an eight million man Army and a one million Navy.

A new 1943 fiscal year war budget beginning July 1, of 85 billions.

Curtailment of civilian production, excepting food and clothing, to bare necessities.

Plans to speed up construction of ships, both naval and cargo, by deferring shipyard workers from military service.

Plans to construct thousands of the largest freight-carrying airplanes in the world to supplement sea-going shipping.

Plans to start offensive action on the battlefronts far ahead of the original 1943 timetable.

Increased speed in inducting men in the armed forces.

Faster production of planes, tanks and guns.

Reclassification of the millions who registered for the draft, including those with dependents.

Plans revealed by Vice President Henry A. Wallace for the important part the United States is to take at the postwar peace table for a world of equality among nations and peoples.

The two-year war timetable was reported to have been arrived at because:

A longer conflict would push United States' war spending to 250 billion dollars, and create a burdensome national debt of around 200 billion dollars.

Extension of the war beyond 1944 might cost the United States more than a million of its finest young men.

Existing supplies of consumer goods will have been absorbed.

been made. Warships and merchant ships are being launched on schedule or ahead of schedule, and in April 36 new cargo ships were added to the American merchant fleet.

4. Guns and ammunition—"Staggering increases" are being made in the production of guns each month, particularly in antiaircraft guns. The rate at which explosives are being produced is many times what it was in 1941 and is illustrated in the case of a single plant which, built since the war started, is now producing more T N T and smokeless powder than the entire American peace-time industry.

5. Construction—Military establishments and war housing projects are going up at "miraculous speed," typical of which is one navy yard warehouse which was completed 30 days after ground had been broken, 60 days ahead of schedule.

Representative Louis Ludlow (Democrat), Indiana, declared in a speech inserted in the Congressional Record that reports of lagging production are false. He quoted figures supplied him by the Office for Emergency Management which he said "completely refute the statements poured out in a perfect deluge by radio commentators, columnists and back-seat drivers to the effect that production is lagging because of industrial disturbances and similar causes."

Shipping Lag Admitted

Ludlow said that the United States is now making in a single month far more than the 2100 military airplanes which was the entire production of the American aircraft industry in 1939. "There has been an increase of more than 50 per cent in the production of aircraft since Pearl Harbor and in certain types of planes critically needed, the monthly rate is more than twice what it was at the time of Pearl Harbor."

On shipping, Mr. Ludlow admitted that merchant shipping had "lagged somewhat behind schedule," but he added that "some of the conditions retarding production have been straightened out and the monthly rate of deliveries is expected to rise soon."

He agreed with Green that the United States had built more tanks already this year than during all of 1941 and in this connection declared, "the monthly rate of production of one type of our present tanks is nearly equal to that of the annual rate of the same type in 1941."

Plant Conversion Sped

On antiaircraft guns, Mr. Ludlow asserted that "the number coming from converted plants is increasing monthly" and "the monthly rate of one type of antiaircraft gun is now more than twice the total production for the entire year 1941.

Talking to newspapermen after the opening session of the A. F. L. executive council, Green declined to commit himself on the proposal for an Anglo-Soviet-American trade union alliance which Sir Walter Citrine, secretary of the British Trades Union Congress, is reported to be bringing to Washington to put before the senior American labor organization early next week.

conditioning of the yard so it could push forward war production.

Toland said his investigators had found that Dewees' employer, Westinghouse, had received 83 contracts totaling $139,218, out of a total of 178 electrical contracts, totaling $300,000, awarded on the Cramp job.

In the several cases cited, Dewees acknowledged submitting bids on stationery of Walker Brothers, an electrical manufacturer at Conshohocken, Pa., and of Adelphia Electrical Co. of Philadelphia, a manufacturers' agent, as well as for Westinghouse.

N. T. Leithold, secretary of the concern, said no authority had been granted Dewees to submit any bids on behalf of Adelphia.

A. M. Callanan, vice president of Walker Brothers, said that Westinghouse was a distributor for his company's goods, and that Walker Brothers had given Dewees authority to submit Walker bids. Callanan said personally, however, that he thought the procedure was "ridiculous." Under questioning, Callanan asserted that it was only done as "courtesy" to his distributor, and that Walker Brothers received no direct remuneration for the favor, although some of the material furnished to Cramp by Westinghouse was bought in the first instance from the Walker concern.

Several specific instances were cited by Toland showing that the Adelphia and Walker Brothers bids submitted by Dewees were lower than Westinghouse, but Dewees contended this made no difference because the materials already had been delivered at prices covered in contracts already existing between Westinghouse and Rainey.

Capt. Ralph T. Hanson, naval shipbuilding supervisor at Philadelphia, said he first discovered "irregularity" through examinations which showed Adelphia and Walker Brothers had submitted identical bids and that one bid was a carbon copy of the other. It was Hanson, Toland brought out, who called the situation to the attention of the committee.

Japanese Riot In Vancouver Detention Quarters

Vancouver, British Columbia, May 13 (AP).—Japanese under detention at the immigration building here staged a riotous demonstration today, smashing windows on the upper floor on which they are held and turning a firehose on people in the street below.

Chunks of plaster torn from the walls of their quarters and an iron grating were thrown into the street, the Japanese meanwhile shouting so loud that they could be heard several hundred yards away. Japanese women stood nearby and waved to them.

All was quiet early tonight. Immigration authorities declined comment.

with the United States, the note pointed out.

It, offered, however, to negotiate a new agreement concerning the war status of the island through normal diplomatic channels.

The French warships at Martinique—the aircraft carrier Bearn and the cruisers Emile Bertin and Jeanne d'Arc—already are vitually immobilized, the note said. Moreover, France has pledged that no units of her fleet ever will be used by the Axis against the United States and Britain, it added.

France stands ready to renew this assurance or to immobilize her warships in American waters, it added.

In answering the United States demands in a formal note to Washington instead of through Admiral Robert, to whom the demands were presented, Vichy ignored Washington's announced intention of negotiating a local agreement with Robert without regard for the Vichy government.

The note was sent directly to French Ambassador Gaston Henry-Haye, in Washington, for presentation to the State Department.

Tire Theft Gang Here Captured; Goods Recovered

Capture of a 9-man gang or organized tire thieves and the recovery of 50 tires and 15 automobiles from which they were removed was revealed at Police Headquarters last night.

The arrests came after a month-long investigation by local police and Fairfax County authorities.

Two of the suspects were held by Virginia police and the seven others, one only 17 years old, were in precinct lockups here. Three of the men have confessed, it was said, telling detectives they stole cars in the District and drove them to Maryland and Virginia where they stripped them.

Capture of two of the men came about after a 70-mile-an-hour chase over the Annandale-Merrifield road in Fairfax County during which the fugitive car crashed on a curve and was demolished. The two occupants were uninjured and attempted to escape through the woods but were apprehended, police said.

Evidence Traces Million Yen From Tokyo To Agency in U. S. Retailing Jap Propaganda

By Dillard Stokes
Post Staff Writer

Evidence in the District Court yesterday traced a million yen from the coffers of Tokyo to the San Francisco bank account of Jikyoku Iinkai—the "commercail" agency which retailed the propaganda that America had no enemies in Asia and that Japan was a friend.

On trial, before Justice T. Alan Goldsborough, were two Americans accused of conspiring with the Japanese agent, Ralph Townsend, and five Japanese to circumvent the Foreign Agents Act.

On two huge blackboards Special Agent John A. Deardorff of the Federal Bureau of Investigation showed the seven women and six men in the jury box how the Japanese consul in San Francisco paid Jikyoku Iinkai $195,521 in two years. Deardorff indicated a specific total of $2937, which he said was paid by Jikyoku Iinkai to one of the men on trial, David Warren Ryder.

Four Escape to Japan

The other defendant is Frederick Vincent Williams, former press agent.

Ralph Townsend, writer of pro-Japanese material on his own account and for Scribners Commentator, already has pleaded guilty to violating the Foreign Agent Act in his work for Jikyoku Iinkai. So has Tsutomu Obana, a Japanese who came to America in 1922.

Four other Japanese, alleged fellow conspirators, are not before the court. They got away, to Japan.

Special Prosecutors Albert E. Arent and Arthur B. Caldwell spent several hours yesterday presenting the pamphlets and radio transcripts for which they say the Japanese government paid the money.

Obana took the stand against Williams and Ryder and described the operations of Jikyoku Iinkai. So did Kiyoshi Miyazaki, former New York manager for Mitsui, the Japanese industrial trust, who said the masterminds of the propaganda agency concealed the source of its money, even from their own lawyers. The Mitsui man is interned at Fort Meade, Md., and was brought to court by an Army officer.

Juror Dies

As court opened yesterday, Justice Goldsborough announced the death, of a heart attack Tuesday night, of Jerome C. Jackson, 49, who was seated as Juror No. 12 late Tuesday. Mr. Jackson's place was taken by the first alternate, Donald A. Onyun, 24.

Meanwhile, two New York men, described as former employes of Charles E. Coughlin's magazine, Social Justice, were grilled before the special grand jury on Axis agents. They were Philip Johnson and Edward Kinsky.

Francis P. Moran, Boston Christian Front leader, obeyed a summons to appear, but was not questioned, being ordered to return today.

Newspaper reporters asked Moran whether he now has any organization or publication, and about the speeches he made after the Pearl Harbor attack on the theme, "this is a Roosevelt war."

"I can't make any statement," the Christian Fronter replied, "you are talking to a reformed man."

Army to Let Students Continue College if They Join Reserves

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

The Army announced plans yesterday under which qualified college men may enroll for military service and continue in school for the present, perhaps until their graduation.

Men of draft age as well as youths of 18 and 19 years old who are considered potential officer material will be enlisted in the Army Reserve under the program and—if the war situation permits—be allowed to complete their education.

Military drill is not contemplated for the group while in school.

"These men," the War Department announced, "are encouraged to continue their education so that when called to active duty they may be better prepared to serve their country, especially in branches of the service requiring technical knowledge."

Besides assuring adequate supplies of properly trained officers in the technical branches, the plan is also designed to give some degree of stability to the Nation's colleges.

As Army reservists, the college men would be exempt from the draft, but would be subject to immediate call into active service at all times.

An examination will be given to the men in their second college year and those who do not meet the required educational standards or "who have not given promise of a capacity for leadership" will be immediately inducted in the active military service.

Failure Means Draft

Students who fail to graduate with their class, withdraw from school for any reason, fail in the qualifying exam or do not "show the necessary qualities for officer material" are likewise subject to immediate call into uniform, "provided there is no valid reason for deferment," the Army said.

The War Department announcement also made it plain that college students enrolled in the Army Reserve, whether of draft age or not, may be called to active duty "at any time the military situation requires such action."

It is the plan, however, to defer the college reservists as far as practicable to maintain a flow of potential officer material for the future years the war might continue.

Upon graduation, the reservists would be sent to an Army camp for basic military training and then, if qualified and selected, be sent to an officer candidate school.

Quotas to Be Set

Quotas will be set for each university and college so that some degree of selection will apply in enlisting students in the special reserve group.

A similar plan has been set up by the Navy and Army Air Force, and the War and Navy Departments will agree on the establishment of separate quotas at each school for the two services.

The program does not affect the continued operation of the present R. O. T. C. system, the War Department said. No military training directed by the War Department is contemplated in the colleges other than the existing R. O. T. C. instruction, officials said.

Many colleges, however, plan to cooperate in the program by adding courses of study which will serve to further prepare the men for their eventual Army service.

Provision is made for the further deferment of certain students after their graduation if they are especially qualified for advanced study or research or are desired by their university as faculty replacements.

To be eligible, students must be American citizens, be physically qualified for Army service and "evidence the basic quqalities necessary for commissioned rank." Although 18 is the minimum age for acceptance, students under 18 may be included in the college's quota provided they agree in writing to enlist as reservists when 18.

Shot Engineer

Saboteur, 20, Admits U. S. System Best

Associated Press WIREPHOTO
FROM A CELL in Cleveland, Sheriff Carl Finegan removes Donald Kinter, 20 (left), to turn him over to United States marshals for arraignment today on sabotage charges.

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, May 13.—Donald Kintner, held for the war sabotage shooting of a railroad engineer, today declared he believed the United States and England have the "best government in the world" but added he still would "like to fight for Germany."

Kintner, 20, Cleveland-born graduate of Elyria High School, pleaded guilty before United States Commissioner B. D. Nicola to a charge of shooting out train signals and was held to the Federal grand jury under $10,000 bond, which he was unable to furnish.

The jury also will act on two other charges of shooting the engineer and destroying signal lights. The three carry maximum penalties of $30,000 fines and 80 years in prison.

Wearing a plaid shirt, the spectacled young defendant appeared without an attorney and without his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Deane S. Kintner, former Clevelanders.

"I don't believe in war for America except in case of invasion," Kintner told reporters.

When Kintner was asked what governments he believed were the best in the world, he said:

"I think those in the United States and England. I believe in the country of Germany, but not Hitler at the head of it. Hitler is a product of the depression. We should be ready for peace now."

The engineer, shot in the head last week while operating a New York Central train carrying war materials near Elyria, is recovering in a Sandusky hospital.

First Lady Warns Of Flu Epidemic Danger in Capital

Buffalo, N. Y., May 13 (AP).—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt said tonight all conditions are present in Washington now for a repetition of the 1918-19 influenza epidemic and similar conditions can develop in any rapidly growing industrial center.

"We haven't an epidemic yet and I hope and pray we won't have one, but we've got all the conditions to bring one about," the First Lady told a meeting sponsored by the Buffalo Federation of Labor.

Mrs. Roosevelt, speaking on housing and home ownership, listed conditions which might produce such an epidemic as overcrowding, difficulty in obtaining proper food, lack of recreational facilities, and lack of proper medical care.

She said Washington was starting on a solution to the problem by erecting a dormitory housing system and recommended cooperative housing projects as another answer, declaring, "The cooperative system is a very good principle to be learning now."

Few Small Plants to Produce All Stoves for War's Duration

For the first time in the war effort, the Government yesterday ordered an industry to "concentrate" its production in a few small plants, thus instituting a pattern of wartime operations practiced in England and probably due to be followed for the war's duration in 30 or more major industries in this country.

Yesterday's bell-wether was the cooking and heating stove industry. Production after July 31 is confined only to factories whose last year's sales were less than two million dollars and which are not located in 30 "labor shortage areas" designated by the War Production Board.

The controversial "concentration plan" has been debated in industry and WPB circles for many months. Its purpose is to enable the continued manufacture of certain necessary civilian items in reduced volume but a maximum efficiency in the few plants which are permitted to run at capacity.

Other, larger, and hence more easily convertible factories are left entirely free to devote their whole production to war items.

The WPB said the order shutting off production in the larger factories is expected to save about 350,000 tons of steel annually for war needs.

If the plan is successful, it is probable that concentration of production will be instituted in the typewriter, road building, farm equipment, printing machinery, refrigerator, plumbing and many other durable civilian goods industries, officials have predicted.

300,000 Tons of Metal Saved

Meantime, the WPB yesterday announced that among the savings resulting from previous conservation and curtailment orders are 300,000 tons of copper and brass products—a large fraction of the Nation's present annual copper consumption.

This metal, which will soon be freed for military use, was largely in the hands of fabricators who intended making such civilian items as ash trays, door knobs, roofing, etc. Copper limitation orders forbade fabrication of these articles and froze the metal stocks.

Through a purchasing arrangement made with a Reconstruction Finance Corporation subsidiary, this metal and even the fabricated parts will be bought back by the Government from some 20,000 copper fabrication concerns, the WPB announced.

Pressure Exerted To Get Man Into Army as Private

By the Associated Press

A Senate Judiciary Subcommittee hearing on the qualification of Thomas F. Meaney, of Jersey City for the New Jersey District Court bench ended yesterday with one of Meaney's critics daring Senator Smathers (Democrat) of New Jersey, to get him into the Army.

The witness, John R. Longo of Jersey City, and Smathers, exchanged heated words after the Senator referred to Longo as a "crackpot."

Smathers said:

"Why aren't you in the Army?"

"If you can get me in within two weeks, I'll go," Longo replied.

Longo was escorted by Smathers to the Senator's office where Smathers told an aide to call the War Department.

Longo, who is 28, said he had been classified 4-F.

"This is the first time I have ever had the pleasure of trying to get a man into the Army as a private," Smathers said. "They all want commissions."

The Senator's aide arranged an appointment for him and Longo with Undersecretary of War Patterson, who was later reported to have authorized of reexamination of Longo.

Farm Funds Bill Increased By Senate Unit

Senate committee turned down the President's cash request but put back the House 25 million dollars appropriation cut and voted a 50 million dollars increase in loan authority "for food production and rehabilitation."

House prunings modified or, restored by the Senate Committee included:

Elimination of the House provision that the ceiling on benefit payments to individual farmers be reduced from $10,000 to $1000.

Increase in the House $1000 limit on the amount FSA may loan to any individual farmer to $2500.

Modified the House eight million dollars over-all limit on Agriculture Department traveling expenses, (a 50 per cent slash), by wiping out the amendment and stipulating the department must save $1,500,000 from travel and turn it back to the Treasury.

Increased from 25 million dollars to 40 million dollars the amount of funds that can be borrowed from the RFC for loans under the farm tenant act.

Eliminated the House ban on funds for operation and maintenance of existing migratory labor camps, but limited funds for this purpose to $1,400,000, half the amount asked by the Budget Bureau.

Authorized the Secretary of Agriculture to spend 44 million dollars from past appropriations to continue school lunch programs and direct distribution of surplus commodities to needy families.

First Auxiliary Camp to Go Up In Middle West

The first camp for the new women's Army Auxiliary Corps will be established in a "centrally located" spot, probably in the Middle West, War Department spokesmen predicted last night.

Exact location, however, has not yet been decided upon. One spokesman indicated that the initial camp would not be in Illinois, but probably in some other Midwestern State.

As the Corps expands, it will be housed in many camps throughout the country, from which women members will be assigned to various Army units, but while it is getting under way probably only the one "centrally located" camp will be used, it was indicated.

Discussion of the location of the first camp came as thousands of women, anxious to sign up in the voluntary corps, flooded the harried War Department with queries—most of which went unanswered.

Roosevelt at Station to Meet Quezon

Harris & Ewing

WAR PRESIDENTS MEET—President Roosevelt was at Union Station yesterday to meet President Manuel Quezon of the Philippines, who arrived in the Capital with his family after a journey which first took them through the war zone to Australia. $500 Incomes Face Taxation

First apparent effect of yesterday's exemption lowering was what the Treasury intended—a blow at committee sentiment for a Federal retail sales levy. Advocates of a sales tax denied their drive had been headed, but conceded it had been hurt. If the Administration insists on the Treasury's present goal—$8,700,000,000 in new revenue—the committee may yet turn to a sales tax to make up the total.

On still another feature of the tax program, the Administration yesterday was reversed. The committee voted 21 to 4 to continue the present depletion credit allowed oil well and mine operators. It agreed as well to retain the present option allowed such operators, to permit them to charge intangible drilling costs to either "expense" or capital. The Treasury had asked abolition of both the depletion credit and the option, to raise 208 million dollars in new revenue.

Several Votes Taken

Several votes were taken in committee before agreement was reached on the $500 exemption level for single persons and $1200 for married couples. An unsuccessful motion was made to retain exemptions where they are, $750 and $1500, respectively.

In voting to allow the married taxpayer a $200 advantage in exemptions the committee returned to the theory of former years that "two can not live cheaper than one." The 1941 tax law abolished the differential, and made married exemptions exactly double the single allowance.

If the new low base is finally enacted, it will carry income tax exemptions to the lowest level in American tax history and even tap single buck privates in the Army on the basis of $50-a-month House pay bill provisions.

Compromise Reached

The vote represented a compromise between conflicting exemption recommendations of the Treasury and Colin F. Stam, committee staff expert. Stam asked exemptions of $500 and $1000, respectively, to bring in 14 million new taxpayers. The Treasury asked $600 and $1200, respectively, reaching 6,900,000 more wage earners. Stam opposed the Treasury plan to cut allowances for dependents to $300 and abolish the earned income tax credit now allowed on normal taxes, and on these the committee also stood pat.

Before deciding what rates should be imposed, the committee called for new revenue estimates on various rate schedules, applied after the proposed exemption cut. The Treasury has asked that $3,400,000,000 more revenue be raised from individuals, but its own schedules were computed on the $600 and $1200 exemption base, with a $300 allowance for dependents. Pending is a Treasury proposal to keep the normal tax at 4 per cent and range surtaxes from 12 to 86 per cent, starting on the first $500 of taxable income. Stam proposed an increase in the normal rate to 6 per cent, and surtaxes ranged from 11 per cent on the first $2000 of taxable income to a top of 80 per cent.

May Decide Today

The more moderate rates would not produce the revenue asked by the Treasury and the committee yesterday informally discussed setting an over-all revenue mark of its own. It reached no decision but may return to that question today before selecting a tax schedule. The Administration has insisted that every dollar of the $8,700,000,000 it has asked in total new revenue is needed to halt the inflation spiral, and the committee in its next vote must decide whether a third to a half of this shall come out of individual income. If it falls far short of that amount in its surtaxes schedules, the Administration will face a new congressional campaign for a sales tax.

tually reached the island fortress of Corregidor.

Proclaimed as Dead

While the Tokyo radio was proclaiming that President Quezon was dead, "Don Manuel" and his party were traveling "under the sea, on the sea and in the air"—headed for Australia and the United States.

Last night the erstwhile insurrectionist, the political fighter who once was called "the Irishman of the Philippines," found sanctuary in the White House, which was to shelter him and his family until they move to the Shoreham Hotel this afternoon.

The next chapter waits on the fulfillment of Gen. Douglas MacArthur's solemn warning to the Japanese conquerors — "I came through and I will return."

Family With Him

With President Quezon yesterday were Mrs. Quezon, their two attractive daughters the Misses Maria Aurora and Zenaida Quezon, and their son, Manuel, jr.

Also in the party were Sergio Osmena, Vice President of the Philippine Commonwealth, and his daughter, Miss Maria Camena; Joaquin M. Elizalde, Resident Commissioner of the Philippines to the United States, and Mrs. Elizalde; Maj. Gen. Basilio Valdes, Philippine Secretary of National Defense; Lieut. Col. Adres Soriano, Secretary of Finance, and Mrs. Soriano.

Others were Col. Manuel Nieto, aide to the President; Lieut. Col. Jamie C. Velasquez, junior aide to the President, a West Point graduate; Maj. Carmelo Manzano, aide to General Valdes; Dr. Benvenuto R. Dino, surgeon of the Philippine General Hospital; Maj. Egmidio C. Cruz of the Philippine Army Medical Corps; Serapio D. Canceran, private secretary to the President, and Capt. Pacifico Ortiz chaplain in the Philippine army.

Former Commissioners There

Among those who greeted the Quezon party at Union Station were four men who at one time or another have served as United States governor general or high commissioner at Manila—Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson, Dwight F. Davis, Supreme Court Justice Frank Murphy, Federal Security Adiministrator Paul V. McNutt, and Francis B. Sayre, the present high commissioner.

At the station also were Secretary of State Cordell Hull and Mrs. Hull, Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes and Mrs. Ickes, Assistant Secretary of the Interior Oscar L. Chapman, and Gen. George C. Marshall, Army chief of staff.

When he came through the portals of Union Station yesterday, President Quezon was wearing a blue business suit and a green tie. For a man 63 years of age who has suffered much ill health in his life, he looked surprisingly well—as well, indeed, as he did when he came here to visit President Roosevelt in 1937.

On that occasion, President Quezon was given the honorary degree of LL. D. by Georgetown University, then celebrating the 148th anniversary of its founding.

The Washington Post of February 27, 1937, reported that President Quezon "said he feared no Japanese invasion, hoped to raise an army of 400,000 men in ten years, and wanted a reciprocal tariff with the United States similar to Cuba's."

To See Press Friday

President Quezon, it was said yesterday, will set up his headquarters at the Philippine Commonwealth Office, 1617 Massachusetts Avenue Northwest. A press conference has been arranged tentatively for Friday at noon.

A number of members of Washington's Filipino colony were at the Union Station to cheer the Quezon party. Teddy de Nolasco, executive editor of The Filipino Reporter, spokesman for 75,000 Filipinos in the United States, issued a statement expressing the hope that the occasion would be one for giving the Philippines a voice in the Pacific War Council.

"The inclusion of the Philippines in the Pacific War Council," he said, "would be a recognition of the demonstrated valor of the Filipino troops and their intense loyalty to the American flag. It would strengthen the faith of the Filipinos in the American people and in those principles of government which all inspired democratic peoples are today fighting to preserve."

Housing Aide Asks Law to Compel Renting of Rooms

The need for living quarters for war workers all over the country, including Washington, has grown so acute that Congress may be asked soon to pass legislation requiring persons living in private homes to share their rooms with them, it was learned here yesterday.

Howard Strong, registration director of the National Housing Agency, disclosed that many regional offices have been unable to find sufficient living quarters for war workers, and admitted that the question of requesting Congress for billeting authority was being explored "very carefully." He added, however, that he thought the mere "threat" that such legislation was being considered would be sufficient to change the minds of many persons heretofore reluctant to open their residences to war workers.

"We should have this mailed fist of legal power within the velvet glove of persuasion," is the way Mr. Strong phrased it.

May Festival To Open Today

The May Festival of the Barney Neighborhood House opens this afternoon at 3 at the Settlement, 470 N Street Southwest.

Mrs. Stanley Hornbeck, Mrs. John Jay O'Connor, Mrs. Howard LeRoy and Miss Dorothy Tirrell represent the trustees as hostesses. Two other members of the board, Mrs. Samuel Herrick, the chairman of the arts and crafts committee, and Mrs. W. O. Boswell, will be in charge of the tables where the products of the looms, the sewing, woodcraft and pottery classes will be on sale. Assisting Mrs. Herrick today are Mrs. Wiley Rutledge and Miss Sheldon Jackson.

Friday afternoon Mrs. Charles McNary and Mrs. Kenneth Holland will act as hostesses. Mrs. Boswell will be in charge of the craft tables assisted by Mrs. Philip Herrick and Mrs. John Pratt.

Allocation of Raw Materials Planned To Really Streamline War Goods Output

By Roy Porter
Associated Press Staff Writer

Dayton, Ohio, May 13.—Streamlining of war production on a Nation-wide basis by definitely allocating raw material for planes, tanks and guns in place of often meaningless priority ratings has given Middlewestern producers of weapons a shot in the arm.

Although details of the new plan decided upon in Washington are not known exactly in this area, the basic idea of establishing a cross-country production line for all essential war industries has brought widespread approval from manufacturers.

These men told correspondents on the National Association of Manufacturers "Production for Victory" tour "it is what we have been waiting months for. Now we can really get going on production."

To Control Distribution

The plan, as explained here, is based on a single controlling unit not for production, not for design of war tools, but for distribution of manufacturing materials, such as aluminum, steel, magnesium or copper.

The bigger producers or producers of the most urgently needed weapons, these manufacturers say, often "got in early and got most of the pot." The little fellow was left out, and even if he was turning out small but essential parts, his production dropped behind and delayed the output of the primary industry of which he was a part.

An example cited by one manufacturer concerned a small company hundreds of miles away which made screws used by the bigger firm in constructing airplane motors. These screws were vital to the production of engines but the little firm was unable to get the steel to make them, with the result that the whole motor production plan was slowed down.

"It is not a question now of moving to high speed production," this manufacturer said. "It is a distinct question of evening up the various production items for a single weapon so that they all come out at the same time and together. Then we will pour out more planes, engines, tanks, guns and ships than anybody ever thought of. And then the battle of production will be won."

Plant Salvage Urged

In the Dayton area, where many phases of war manufacturing are situated producers have been proposing a "metal salvage" campaign inside former commercial plants which now either have been closed down or shifted to war work.

These men say "lying around idle" in many factories are tons of steel, aluminum, copper and bronze which "somebody could use and ought to have."

"We have been taking aluminum pots and pans away from housewives, now let's get into the industrial warehouses and see what is stacked up there," a machine gun manufacturer suggested.

Correspondents on this tour visited a National Cash Register plant near Dayton which ordnance officers described as "the best example of almost complete conversion of industrial production from peacetime to wartime work. The factory makes hundreds of highly complicated articles, from machine gun magazines to automatic fuses for shells, together with many smaller and some very secret items.

Col. E. A. Deeds, company spokesman, said all the war work, now ahead of schedule, was undertaken without constructing new buildings and that 70 per cent of the company's peacetime machines, some of them 35 years old, were being used on war manufacturing.

Later, in the Indianapolis area, they toured an Allison airplane engine division of General Motors Corporation where F. C. Kroeger, general manager, said peak production already has been reached on the 1,325 horsepower liquid-cooled motor used in British and American scouting planes.

Telegraph Merger Demanded by Fly

Washington Bureau of Chicago Sun

Chairman James Lawrence Fly of the Federal Communications Commission yesterday told Congress that they should "without delay" force the merger of the two major domestic telegraph companies.

Appearing before the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee holding hearings on legislation that would bring about the merger of Western Union and Postal Telegraph, Fly revealed that the Government has already advanced six million dollars "to keep Postal Telegraph going." He said he did not believe this could be continued.

1000 Attend Cathedral Rites For Dr. Phillips

More than 1000 persons of all faiths, including legislative and religious leaders, yesterday attended funeral services for the Very Rev. ZeBarney Thorne Phillips, dean of Washington Cathedral and chaplain of the United States Senate.

Services held in the Crossing of the Washington Cathedral began with a solemn procession of honorary pallbearers, diocesan clergy, representatives from the St. Alban's School for Boys, the National Cathedral School for Girls, the Federation of Churches, and other organizations.

Those in the procession proceeded to seats in the presbytery between the choir stalls and the Communion rail.

Bishop Conducts Services

The coffin rested on the first step east of the Communion rail, and flowers were banked on the chancel steps, and on both sides of the aisle of the great choir.

The Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington, conducted the services from the Episcopal Book of Common Prayer, and the Lesson was read by the Very Rev. Hughell E. W. Fosbroke, dean of the General Theological Seminary, New York City.

Honorary pallbearers were Senators Carter Glass of Virginia, Bennett C. Clark, Missouri; Warren R. Austin, Vermont, and Robert A. Taft, Ohio, representing the Senate; H. L. Rust, jr., Corcoran Thom, William R. Castle, C. F. R. Ogilby and H. B. Wilson, representing the Cathedral Chapter, and Charles F. Wilson, Richard W. Hynson, William Miller, Richard E. Shands and Richard H. Wilmer, the vestry of Epiphany Church, where Dean Phillips was rector 17 years.

Church Groups Represented

Other official guests included the Very Rev. Noble C. Powell, Bishop Coadjutor of the Maryland Diocese and former dean of Washington Cathedral; the Right Rev. Walter Henry Gray, Suffragan Bishop of Connecticut; the Rev. Dr. Oscar F. Blackwelder, president of the Federation of Churches; Dr. Worth M. Tippy, acting federation executive secretary; Rabbi Norman Gerstenfeld, spiritual leader of the Washington Hebrew Congregation and chairman of the committee on religious life in the Nation's Capital.

After cremation, the ashes will be placed in the Columbarium of the Chapel of Joseph of Arimathea.

The Cathedral Choral Society last night dedicated its rendition of Verdi's "Requiem Mass" to Dr. Phillips' memory.

Last Rites Held For Mrs. Fawley

Funeral services for Mrs. Nellie L. Fawley, 52, wife of Harry Fawley, who died at her home at Travilah, Md., after a long illness, were held yesterday afternoon at the funeral home of W. Reuben Pumphrey, Rockville. The Rev. Elgar C. Soper, pastor of the Methodist Church at Potomac, Md., officiated and burial was in Forest Oak Cemetery, Gaithersburg.

Besides her husband, Mrs. Fawley is survived by six children, Mrs. Francis E. Henderson and John Linthicum, by a former marriage; Anna Mae, Laura V., Ruth Marie and Charles William Fawley; a stepson, Harry Fawley, and a brother, Pearl Baughman, all of Travilah. She was proprietress of a general store at Travilah for 20 years and was a life-long resident of Montgomery County.

Also unopposed in the Press Club elections are Betty Hynes of the Times-Herald for first vice president, and Estelle Welsh of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch, for recording secretary. Other nominees include:

For second vice president—Frances Lide of the Washington Star and Lily Shephard of the War Department Public Relations Office.

For the three positions on the board of governors—Esther Van Waggoner, Washington correspondent for Michigan papers and retiring president of the club; Katherine Lewis, publicity officer for the American Red Cross; Anne Williams Wheaton, publicity director for the women's division of the National Republican Party, and Vella Winner, publicity director for the General Federation of Women's Clubs.

National Cathedral Plans To Dedicate North Porch

The north porch, first permanent entrance of the Washington Cathedral, will be dedicated today at 10 a. m. as a feature of the annual meeting of the women's committees of the National Cathedral Association.

The meeting opened yesterday afternoon with executive sessions in the cathedral library.

The porch is the first major unit of the cathedral to be completed since the last stone was laid in the crossing in 1936, and has been financed by members of the women's committees of the National Cathedral Association.

The dedication ceremonies will follow a celebration of Holy Communion at 9:30 a. m. The dedicatory music will be given by the Cathedral Choir. Miss Mary E. Johnston, of Glendale, Ohio, president of the women's committees of the association, will formally present the porch, which will be accepted by the Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington.

Following the service, association members will be entertained at a luncheon in the National Cathedral School for Girls. Dr. John R. Mott, past president of the Y. M. C. A. International will address the women in the Cathedral at 2:30 p. m. The afternoon service will open with a procession in which students of the National Cathedral School for Girls will carry flags of 48 States.

Coroner Probing Dr. Phillips' Death

Pathological Tests

It is believed Dr. MacDonald made arrangements for the post-mortem examination at that time and that the body was removed to the Morgue following funeral services.

It is probable that the post-mortem examination will not be completed until after pathological tests are completed. These latter generally take about a week.

Dr. Phillips became ill Friday night but despite his condition conducted a funeral service Saturday. His condition became worse, and he succumbed Sunday night. His wife and daughter were with him when he died.

Blackout Lessons

As many expected, the blackout Tuesday night revealed administrative flaws in the organization of the District's defense setup. Equipment was dispatched to the scenes of simulated "incidents" without proper evaluation of the need. Had the raid been a real one, there would have been too much equipment present at some points and not enough at others. This, to be sure, was an elementary shortcoming which can be eliminated in future blackouts by estimating more carefully the specific requirements of each disaster area.

Much more serious, however, was the obvious inadvisability of having only one control center through which all reported "incidents" must clear. More than a fortnight ago Mr. Landis, the director of the Office of Civilian Defense, pointed out that the present control system is inadequate. He recommended the establishment of subcontrol centers, each serving an area with its own equipment. In the light of what happened Tuesday night Colonel Kutz, who was in charge of the blackout, was moved to second the idea of subcontrol centers. For it was frankly impossible to receive and act, with maximum efficiency and dispatch, on the many incidents reported. When the blackout ended, in fact, there were still a great many incidents which had not been dealt with.

The sensible way to avoid such a bottleneck, of course, is to start at once to put Mr. Landis' suggestion into effect. One of the main purposes of Tuesday night's blackout was to find out whether the present control system would bog down under the volume of calls for equipment. This is exactly what happened. Even with greater decentralization there will probably remain a certain amount of congestion at the subcontrol centers. For any air raid, simulated or real, places an extraordinary burden on communications. The wise course, therefore, is so to direct advance preparations as to minimize the burden on communications when the calls from bombed areas begin to come in.

Crimean Prelude

Whether the present fighting in the Crimea is an isolated encounter, a local offensive, or the curtain raiser to a general German assault all along the Eastern Front, the next few months are likely to be the most fateful in modern history. The Nazis themselves say that the fighting is "the first installment of the spring offensive," but that might mean anything or nothing.

In the smoke of conflicting claims it is difficult to see the true dimensions of just what has occurred in the five days since the attack was launched. Hitler's field headquarters has issued a communique in which the assertion is made that the critical battle to break through to the Kerch Peninsula has been "decided," and that 40,000 Russian prisoners have been taken by the onrushing Nazis. The Russians, for their part, merely announce a "retirement to new positions."

Wherever the truth lies, it is a fair assumption that this time as so often in the past the German claims are out of all proportion to the realities. Evidently the fighting in Crimea during the past week has been no mere skirmish in force. It may very well be the first stage in the long-anticipated German all-out offensive, for conditions are all favorable for it. While climatic conditions elsewhere on the Russian front continue to make large-scale operations by mechanized forces difficult, the weather and the roads in the Crimea are now allies of warmaking. The Crimea, be it also remembered, is on the road to the Caucasus. And the Caucasus remains a highly tempting lure to Hitler both because of its wealth of oil and because it is on the road to the Middle East where the Germans hope, perhaps, to effect a juncture with the Japanese.

Unlike every other campaign, the offensive which Hitler has launched in the Crimea lacks the advantage of surprise. This time the Fuehrer has done the expected. That being the case, the force he must throw into the fight must be very great. Still, if achieved at all, the Russian record during the past 11 months of the Eastern Front war has been such that we can anticipate that Hitler will have to pay dearly for every foot of ground. The Russians today are not only better prepared than they were some months ago to resist a Nazi onslaught. They have had time to adjust themselves to Hitler's methods.

We cannot assume, of course, that there will not be reverses, even serious reverses. The accumulated reserves which Germany continues to possess are still enormous. And Hitler will certainly throw everything he has into the fray in an effort to achieve a favorable decision before too long. For that reason everything must be done by the United States and Russia's other allies to help her directly. We must rush essential supplies to the Soviet Union and keep Hitler busy elsewhere.

End Of An Era

The economic and social effects of the gasoline rationing would seem to depend first upon the duration of the war and secondly upon the extent to which it may later be possible to modify the restrictions. It is possible that should one or both of our major antagonists be defeated within, say, the next six or seven months, the gasoline rationing would have no more permanent or drastic effect upon American life and mores than, say, the sugar rationing. If, however, the war should last several years or, as some have predicted, a decade, the effects would be tremendous. For then, in all probability the rationing would be extended throughout the entire country, and most of the various occupational groups now exempted would be deprived of their advantages. Likewise the burden thus placed upon other means of transportation would have become so severe that some system of rationing will certainly be applied to other forms of travel.

This is not to say that the consequences will be uniformly or necessarily unpleasant, though during the period of adjustment there will almost certainly be widespread discomfort, sacrifice and individual injustice. One probable consequence of an interdict on travel would be the development of a more intense local life and a relapse into regional idiosyncrasies. Just as cheap and easy automobile travel has made for uniformity and standardization, so its extinction might in the end make for diversity—the diversity which characterized European civilization between the fall of the Western Empire and the first decade of this twentieth century. Presently, perhaps, there would be an impetus to local industry, with more and more of what we call "nonessential production" moving closer to the point of consumption—a sort of industrial counter-revolution, as it were.

Mr. A. A. Berle, in an address in New York yesterday, spoke of another profound effect of the new rationing. "We shall once more have the great luxury of living again in our own minds," he says. In other words, we shall have more time to plumb our own internal resources—to read books and generally to seek contact with ideas in our local milieu. That, of course, would be a good thing. We should merely be returning to habits of life and thought which served the country well up to a generation ago. In those days, as Mr. Berle says, there was such a "passionate thirst for access to books" that people used to ride miles on a buckboard to the village center of a Saturday afternoon because that was "library day." Then after the work was done, family reading was the rule; a habit which the automobile and the movie have curbed, if not destroyed.

Automotive transportation has certainly been the most profound social and economic factor in twentieth century American history. Its development during three decades has seemed marvelously rapid. To reverse that development within the space of a few years cannot fail to have fateful consequences which none of us, not even Mr. Leon Henderson, can possibly foresee.

Meaning Of X

Some idea of the formidable administrative difficulties presented by rationing and price fixing is afforded by the current registration for gasoline. Here in this city there have been unconscionable delays at the registration stations. Clerks seem to have handed out favored classifications without warrant in the wording of the regulations. It would seem, for instance, that many members of Congress asked for and got X cards providing for unlimited allowances when there was a question whether they were entitled to them. An X card is available only for a car in essential use, and that includes Federal Government business. But it cannot be said that all Congressmen are justified in asserting that their cars are altogether devoted to Government service. That was made plain by the OPA before and after registration began, and has now been reaffirmed by Mr. Henderson.

It is not an edifying spectacle that the public has been compelled to witness—this of members of Congress taking it for granted that they were entitled to X cards. Success of rationing and price fixing, as we have said several times, depends upon public cooperation. Overpolicing is neither practicable nor desirable. And the temper of the people has hitherto shown that there is no necessity for it. Till the registration began for gasoline, grumbling about the spread of restraints was at a minimum. Restrictions on normal habits of life have been regarded as inevitable, and the people in general have felt, indeed, that their Government held to life and business as usual longer than was warranted. However, public cooperation will evaporate overnight at the first signs of favoritism.

There is nothing like example for maintaining public cooperation. That is axiomatic in Europe. In Holland, for example, the Queen took to a bicycle along with her subjects when gasoline was restricted, and in Britain the members of Parliament share the deprivation of gasoline from which the average Briton suffers. The obligation of equality before the bylaws under which we shall be more and more compelled to live is surely the more incumbent upon the officials and elected persons of our democracy.

Welcome To Quezon

There will be a peculiar warmth in the welcome which Washington will extend to Manuel L. Quezon. President Quezon is the head of a government and a people with whom we have fought side by side in the struggle with the Japanese. At Bataan and at Corregidor they have earned an immortal name in an epic of valor which belongs to their history as well as to ours. Few people have earned their freedom more nobly. If we are ever likely to forget it, there will always be General MacArthur to remind us—the soldier who bound the heterogeneous groups in the Philippine Islands together into a fighting unit without a superior in this war.

The man who is now in our midst is what Resident Commissioner J. M. Elizalde calls "the living spirit of the Filipino people." As such we should honor him. But he claims personal consideration because he remained at his post as head of the Philippine government while racked with illness. Somebody who saw him with his friend MacArthur on the rock at Corregidor describes him as "a mere ghost of his former self, emaciated to a degree and hardly able to walk." Yet he continued to manage the affairs of state with his old coolness and efficiency. The courage he summoned in order to work and to inspire was indomitable, for his lungs were punctured by hemorrhages.

When, just before the end, Quezon was moved to Australia, we suggested that this country was the place for him. Here he would find not only a more salubrious clime, but also an exile that would at the same time be home. Now he is here, and the American people will hail him as a shining example of the deathless self of the free man. His country is now in the hands of a savage invader. But wherever Quezon is, there will be the free Philippines, and there will also be the pledge that the tomorrow of liberty will be realized.

Charge It!

The Government undoubtedly has the right idea about discouraging the piling up of personal debts as an antidote to inflation. But it will take some time for us to get used to the new restrictions on charge accounts. From now on, apparently, we shall have to pay our bills in 40 to 70 days. This is bitter news, and it brings the war dreadfully close. Because, if you take the joy out of shopping, what is there left? Nothing but the realization that your sins of shopping exuberance will catch up with you quicker than ever. For the Federal Reserve Board has ruled that articles bought on charge accounts must be paid for by the 10th day of the second month after purchase. This applies to scores of articles—wearing apparel, footwear, haberdashery, household effects, and so on—and proves that the country doesn't have to worry any longer about that dilapidated shibboleth, "business as usual."

We suppose retailers took time out of their preoccupation with price fixing to chortle when they heard about the ruling. For it affects unpaid accounts already carried on store books. There is at least some consolation for consumers in the fact that, should their accounts remain unpaid on the appointed date, they may sign an agreement to clear up their debt in fixed installments over a six-month period. For many this will remove the sting of the Reserve Board's ruling. But not for us. The prospect of risking the loss of our retail credit has already led us to cross off a dozen items on the list of things we had hoped to buy. Could this have occurred to the Federal Reserve Board when it was moved to such ruthless action?

A SETTLING

The voices of children at twilight
Speak the last thought of day.
There is only a murmer in treetops!
The birds have flown their way.

This is a moment settling:
Like sound of a feather falling:
This is the time that softens
The thought that is coolly calling.

Out of the green of the meadow
Beneath the blue of the night,
The voices, almost silent,
Hum to the star, and its light.

District Housing

A great deal has already been written about the Washington housing situation, but I do not hesitate to bring up the subject once more because so little has been done about the housing problem. Most words written and uttered on the subject appear to have been wasted.

What I wish to contribute for consideration is not a repetition of the oft-repeated story of the lack of housing facilities in the District. That story has certainly been plainly told by better informed people than myself. But what I fail to understand and what I would like to have clarified is, why haven't those institutions responsible for the legislative and administrative ends of the program, namely the Congress and the National Housing Agency, moved to correct this bad situation which is steadily becoming worse? After months of hearings and testimony, Congress finally passed a 50 million dollar bill for District housing. That was quite a few weeks ago. Now all that is being repeated in order to get funds for the already approved measure. Is it possible that Congress has changed its mind and decided that there is no need for additional housing in the District, for both single and married war workers? I believe the burden rests equally upon Mr. Blandford and the Nation Housing Agency and the Congress to get this necessary program started. Perhaps better coordination between the legislative and administrative branches would bring an end to all the apparent misunderstanding and disagreement which has delayed housing in the District.

The Foreign-Language Press

In your issue of May 2 you published a letter which claims that the foreign-language press "has done irreparable damage to the land which has tolerated it." This charge is so untrue and unjust that it deserves a reply.

Despite its shortcomings, the foreign-language press has been an agency of education and Americanization without equal among our foreign-born population. To discontinue the foreign-language press—in other words, to insist on speaking English to a man who does not understand it—would be to refuse to speak to him altogether. For the average immigrant coming here as an adult, the language of his childhood is his main road to new ideas. Learning English is often a matter of years. Our foreign-language newspapers have consequently been the most effective approach to millions of our foreign-born population. They have reached the newcomer, generation after generation, from the day of his arrival. They have spoken his language but with an accent so completely American that they have proved a potent force in his adjustment and ultimate naturalization.

The foreign-language press, as a matter of fact, is older than our Republic, and its work still has a special significance. It should hardly be necessary to point out that in a Nation like the United States, built so largely by immigration, there are still several millions of our people whose English is a very imperfect instrument. Many of them will be found wherever the hard work of the Nation is being done—on our farms, in the mines, the oil fields, the steel mills and the heavy industries throughout the country. Their spare time is limited. They learn under difficulties. But they do learn. Millions of them have already become citizens. And the foreign-language press is an important influence to this end. Instead of doing "irreparable harm," its work, as a medium of mass education among our foreign-born population, has been invaluable and irreplaceable.

The Government itself has continually recognized foreign-language newspapers as an effective medium through which to explain and spread the American way of life, to reach groups and regions where no other means or agencies can gain access. Now that we are at war, such cooperation is more important than ever if every part of our population is to understand our war aims and contribute its full part to the measures necessary to achieve victory.

A small number of foreign-language papers, unfortunately, are openly or covertly pro-Axis. So are dozens of publications in English. Both should be effectively dealt with. Foreign-language publishers and editors regret the small percentage of their number who display a questionalble loyalty, but they resent the implication that as a whole they are not stanchly American, and claim the right to the same freedom enjoyed by the English-language press. To suppress a newspaper because it is published in a foreign language, as some have suggested, would be exactly the same, in principle, as discharging a worker because he is an alien or foreign-born. "Such a policy," President Roosevelt said in a recent statement, "is as stupid as it is unjust. It plays into the hands of the enemies of American democracy."

Happily, Attorney General Biddle recently confirmed our traditional American policy. "The policy of the Department of Justice," he said, "is not to suppress foreign-language newspapers. Appropriate action against seditious newspapers will be taken, regardless of the language in which they are printed, but those loyal to the United States have nothing to fear from the Government."

In this connection it is interesting to recall that when last spring certain critics tried to shut off the voice of the foreign-language radio, James Lawrence Fly, Chairman of the Federal Communications Commission, took occasion to say:

"In my opinion, foreign-language broadcasts are of considerable value. I believe that it would be a serious mistake for either the Government or the broadcast stations to take any action at this time to discontinue or curtail them. These programs have an important place in the lives of foreign-born citizens and residents, and it is likely that their elimination would be regarded as a senseless discrimination, arousing antagonism and hostility. In particular, I wish to concur in your opinion that these broadcasts can play an important role in the 'Americanization process.' It seems clear to me that any persons who are bringing pressure on stations to discontinue foreign-language programs are pursuing a shortsighted policy and should not be encouraged."

Uprooted

While visiting here in the National Capital, I have had the pleasure of taking part in many timely discussions and the one which has left me thinkings and wondering is the uprooting of farm families, and the war-time problem created thereby.

Let us pause a moment and ask ourselves this question: "Who is hurt most in this particular problem?" My answer is and will be the child. Just what sort of upbringing can any child have in education and health, by being constantly "on the move?" As in so many cases, the children are the real sufferers and consequently become the innocent victims.

When victory is achieved, who will preserve the peace of tomorrows? That job will become the responsibility of our young people of today. Unless given every advantage physically, mentally, socially and spiritually, will they be able to do a good job? Hardly!

Why can't some plan be adopted to anchor families to the land? If we could rehabilitate families, owner-operated family type farms would be reestablished, which is so essential to the well being of rural America. I can also see wherein such a plan would tend to create self reliant, sturdy American farm owners. Above all, it would remove the cause of our underprivileged children, thus strengthening our future generation.

Trailer-Bus

Since it seems necessary for Washington to become more overcrowded with Civil Service workers, a number of whom do nothing most of the time, why not adopt the semitrailer-bus idea used in a number of European cities as far back as 1938? Because of the risk of spoiling the make-up of many Government workers by rude contact with overhanging branches of trees double-decked buses cannot be used. The transit company formerly used trailers on certain of their trolley runs, such as Mount Pleasant, during the rush hours, but for some reason abandoned the practice and converted the trailers into motor-equipped trolley cars.

The proposed semitrailer-bus would, of course, have no seats in accord with recent administration ideas. There would be three rows of horizontal pipes supporting a light canopy or roof and a series of pipes would reach to the floor for the riders to grip during their trip to and from the office. Side doors would be provided, electrically operated by the bus driver or by a conductor who would collect fares on entering. About 100 to 110 riders could be carried on a trip.

This new type of bus would be better adapted to the Government worker of both sexes rather than the bulbous and senescent standby of past years.

The Post Impressionist

Quaint Old Town

Lillibianca and I, along with several other people, have packed our lares and penates and have moved to Washington to make our home. Despite all the stories to the contrary we did find a place to live, the rent is fairly reasonable and the house is kept immaculate. Time was when the letters D. C. after Washington stood for 'District of Columbia." Now all and sundry are joined in a crusade to hint that they stand for "Don't Come."

But don't think that we are angry because President Roosevelt referred to some of us as parasites. Like the columnist we didn't realize that the President knew we were here until he said that.

Washington has aptly been called the wonder city. One wonders where everything is. Lillibiana and I stopped inquiring for directions about ten days after we moved here. We just got tired of hearing about the wheel and its spokes. It is all so beautifully simple to the natives; and all so bafflingly confusing to the auslanders. It got so that we started making bets on it. We'd see a likely victim and I'd say to Lillibianca, "I bet he'll tell us about the wheel and the spokes" and I'd ask him where Chapin Street was and he'd begin: "Well, I guess you mean Northwest. Now Washington is laid out like a wheel—." Then I'd win the bet and Lillibianca wouldn't get the money for her new dress.

The explanation about the alphabet—first, second or third alphabet, is almost as bad. It has the added complication that the street we want is just one of the exceptions to the rule.

But the habit is catching. Lillibianca wrote to her sister Marcelle to come down and visit us. (Just as if living expenses here weren't high enough without inviting in-laws.) Well, Marcelle accepted, just as I feared she would, and Lillibianca sat right down and wrote her a letter telling her how to reach our house. It seems that Washington is laid out like a wheel and the Capitol is the hub, etc.

Of course, it isn't up to me to pass wheezes on to you. You probably know them all already. For all I know you may be the person who makes them up in the first place. We mean, especially, that one about Washington being the only place in the United States where sound travels faster than light. The other one that "when people in Washington say the enemy they do not mean the Axis, they mean the fellow in the office across the hall" is almost as bad.

Edgar Saltus in his essay on "The Heart of Manhattan" (you are at liberty to look this up in your own copy of "The Upland of Dreams" if you don't believe me) described New York, when that cheap and dirty trading post became the Capital of the United States, as "infested with pigs, strewn with garbage, infamously paved, infrequently lighted, miasmatic, cheerful and bedrabbled."

To the best of my knowledge there are no pigs in the District. Otherwise the description suits this citadel of confusion on the Potomac. But despite all this Lillibianca and I have decided that we wouldn't live anywhere else.

Possessing, as you do, an encyclopedic knowledge of American history you will recall that from September 30, 1777, to June 22, 1778, our National Capital was located at York, Pa. Now that happens to be my own particular section of the country and I know its good points and its drawbacks. Those of us who are fond of beer and pretzels might perhaps be forgiven for wishing that it had never been moved. On the other hand, those of us who know and speak the English language are just as well satisfied that it did move. Speaking of pretzels—just why don't they ever serve pretzels with beer in this city? As Lillibianca observed: "Life in Washington isn't all beer and skittles" and we had to admit that we hadn't seen a skittle since we came here.

Before deciding that perhaps we are too critical in our observations anent Washington it might be well to ponder the description of this city used by Congressman O'Connor in the House on March 13, 1942. Unless he has exercised his constitutional right to have the Record corrected (or his remarks extended) in the meantime, the gentleman said:

Washington is "a city of chaotic conditions. A city bursting with red tape and gold braid, captain's bars and general's stars. A city overflowing with pleasure seekers, grafters, chiselers and other parasites."

Concerning the last three, we wouldn't know. Our business never takes us up to the Hill. But the poetic reference to military insignia reminds us of the man who saw the soldier wearing a blue star on a white field bounded by a red band on his shoulder. Asking for an explanation he was told that it represented a general in a fog trying to break through the official red tape.

But Lillibianca and I will still take Washington for our money. It costs more to live here, perhaps, but it is worth more. If you don't think so just go live in Lancaster or York or Scranton yourself. There are so many things we can do here that don't cost anything. Why it is even fun to saunter into the Union Station and watch the countless Andromechas taking farewell of innumerable Hectors.

Most amusing to us, however, is the local custom of blaming everything on Tiber Brook. No matter what happens where it is always because of Tiber Brook. The other day we went off and forgot to empty the drip pan beneath our refrigerator. Did our good landlady reprimand us? She did not. She merely observed that Tiber Brook had broken through on the second floor.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

A Matter Of Will Power

MARSHAL FOCH, who was placed in command of the Allied forces in the dark days of 1918 when the Germans launched their last great offensive, has left us an account of the state of mind in which he took hold of his task:

LIPPMANN

I could not permit myself for a moment to admit that, powerfully reinforced as we were, we could allow ourselves to be beaten in 1918 when, with means so relatively meager, we had conquered in 1914 . . . With the means at our disposal, the question of stopping the enemy was in the first place a matter of will power on the part of the high command.

We are at a point today where America's capacity to influence effectively, perhaps decisively, this summer's fighting is in the first place a matter of will power on the part of the high command. Thanks to the notable achievements of the War Department in organizing our ground and air forces, thanks to the Nation's remarkable success in the struggle for production, we have a great and rapidly growing military power. But we are not yet exerting that power in anything like its full force, the reason being that we do not seem to have enough shipping to move enough of it across the seas to the places from which our enemies can be attacked. The reason we do not seem to have enough shipping is that public opinion and official thinking are about five months behind the times. We are still dealing with transportation as we dealt with production in the days of the OPM and before Pearl Harbor, that is to say without the will power to put aside business and politics and diplomacy as usual.

THE STRUGGLE for war production was fought and won in December. Because it was won, the seemingly impossible is being accomplished, the things which could not be done are being done, the program which not only our enemies but many among us here thought "fantastic" is going to be fulfilled, perhaps even surpassed. This has been done by will power, for once the will to produce was set, the ways to produce were found.

The struggle for war transportation is now being fought and it can and it should be won now—in this month of May. Again it is primarily a matter of will power, and only secondarily a matter of steel plates and such things. For while we must obviously push relentlessly the building of cargo ships and of war vessels to protect them, it is an illusion and a counsel of defeat to think that the great pool of allied ships is not now capable of being used far more effectively for the war. It is. What was done for shipping in 1918 can be repeated now, once we make up our minds again to use what we have and not to sit around waiting until we have a whole lot more. We shall be astonished—if the whole story of how an Army of two million men was moved to France is ever told. Fortunately there are men still alive and active who know it and can tell it to officials who do not know the story.

THE ESSENTIAL move in solving the shipping problem is to place all Allied shipping under the control of men who will make their decisions on broad military considerations alone. These considerations will include, of course, the indispensable requirements of the war industries which depend upon overseas supplies. But during this year of decision broad military considerations need not include the luxuries or the conveniences of American civilians. They need not and absolutely should not include anything arising out of prewar or postwar commercial trade. They need not include and absolutely should exclude all ideas of commercial competition among the United Nations. They need not include any ideas having to do with the prosperity of the merchant marine after the war. In short, we need to convert the shipping industry to war as drastically as we have converted the automobile industry. If we do that, we shall dig up more ships more quickly for the war than we can possibly hope to build in the next six crucial months.

It would be mealy-mouthed to refrain from saying that, as in 1918, the control and direction of shipping cannot be left to the commercial ship operators. They have done and are doing loyal and useful service, and in the technical operation of ships they have a necessary work to do. But control and direction—deciding where ships shall be used and what shall be carried and where—is no more a matter for commercial ship operators than is allocating tanks or bombers a matter for the managers of industrial plants.

THERE SHOULD be no demagogy about this, no impugning of anyone's motives, no reflection on anyone's actions. But it must be said on the basis of conclusive experience that it requires outsiders—competent ones of course—to direct the full conversion of an industry from peace to war. For the outsider sees the problem freshly and is not bound by the habits of his work in time of peace.

IT IS not enough to build ships. It is not enough to concentrate ships. It is also necessary to protect them. On this point, which is obviously a delicate and difficult one to discuss, it is, I believe, our duty to ask ourselves whether there is not a remaining peacetime mentality somewhere which makes the war against the submarine less effective than it could be.

The peacetime mentality would manifest itself in a certain rivalry, a certain stand-offishness, a certain lack of teamwork by the Navy and Army. It would manifest itself in an excessive desire for perfection, as for example in requiring ships that are so good they cannot be built quickly enough, in not using makeshifts that men will resort to, and manage to make work, if they feel sufficiently desperately urgent about it.

Cardin's Resignation

By Eric Estorick

Effect On Conscription

THE RESIGNATION of P. J. A. Cardin, Canadian minister of public works and transport, on Monday from Prime Minister Mackenzie King's cabinet will have, undoubtedly, a profound effect upon the eventual solution of the "conscription problem" in Quebec. Cardin's decision brings a halt temporarily to conflicting speculations which have been rife in Ottawa since the plebiscite vote was cast on April 27, in which all Canada except Quebec voted affirmatively, as to what Mr. King's next move might be. Thus, an already complex problem is confounded even more by Cardin's resignation, since he was a stanch supporter of the affirmative position on the proposition that the government's hands be freed to act as the war emergency demanded on the subject of conscription for overseas service.

In his report to the New York Times on Tuesday, P. J. Philip indicated "that Cardin would make a complete statement on his resignation during the discussion on the man power bill and that he would, in addition, come out as a leader of a large group of Quebec Liberals and others in opposition to the government." The first point in this announcement, that Cardin would make a statement concerning his resignation, indicates that the whole situation is packed with dynamite, for resigning cabinet ministers do not customarily make any public explanations for their action. The second point, that Cardin would lead an opposition to the government, indicates, as well, that the retiring minister may not be content with simply explaining his differences but is expected to lead a determined fight against his former chief who on Monday introduced into the Canadian House of Commons a bill to remove the anticonscription clause from the national mobilization act.

WHAT DIFFERENCES could have arisen between the time that the vote was announced as 2,926,856 votes in favor of the affirmative position to 1,618,730 votes against, that then prompted Minister Cardin to act as decisively as he has?

There is no doubt that great pressure has been directed against the prime minister ever since the "yes" vote won by a 63 per cent to 37 per cent majority, by leaders of the opposition parties as well as many members of his own Liberal Party. The view taken by the direct-actionists was that the people had spoken and that any reason for temporizing on the subject of conscription had been liquidated by the wish of the people expressed through the constitutional device of plebiscite. A rumor which gained considerable currency in Ottawa last weekend was to the effect that if King delayed in introducing a plan for the modification of the national mobilization act that three of his key war ministers would resign. The fact that they have not resigned, and that Cardin has, indicates that while the rumor may have been nothing else but phantasy, a severe difference of opinion must have prevailed in the cabinet which prompted Cardin to act as he did.

THE CHIEF DIFFERENCE between Cardin and King may now revolve itself around the definition of the state of the war emergency. When Cardin spoke to French Canadians in support of the affirmative position in the plebiscite he pointed out that a "yes" vote did not necessarily mean conscription—it meant simply that Mr. King would be free to act, unhampered, as the situation demanded. Cardin may now take the view that no new emergency has arisen and that King's decision to apply conscription for overseas service is a betrayal of the premise of plebiscite, and indicates a buckling down under pressure from political forces from the rest of Canada. In support of this view Cardin will have the assistance not only of many Quebec members of Parliament but of M. P.'s from other areas of the country whose constituents voted in the negative. These M. P.'s may take the view that they have received a mandate from them and that they must vote "no" to Mr. King's suggestions.

In a showdown of strength, however, there is little question that Mr. King will emerge victorious. Critics of the plebiscite plan have taken the view consistently that if Mr. King had risked taking the issue of conscription for overseas service to the floor of the House of Commons—before he announced the plebiscite—and called for a vote, he might have lost the support of a number of Quebec M. P.'s. But the rest of the country, according to these same critics, would have stood almost solidly behind him. Even with the defection of Quebec M. P.'s, King would have maintained a working majority in the House and the issue would have been closed. Quebec would have had to bow to the will of the majority. A new opposition within his own party might have been created to fight King, to be sure, but the whip hand would have been his. With the plebiscite vote being what it was, it now means that the opposition to Mr. King will be much greater than it would have been originally for the reason, as has been indicated, that M. P.'s who might have originally supported King may now be obliged to vote "no" because their constituents voted that way. On the other hand, King has his political opposition on the spot. Up to the present time the Conservative Party, in particular, has fought any line which King has taken simply because it was a party in opposition to King's Liberals. Now, however, with King taking the lead in applying the positive aims of the plebiscite proposals, for which the Conservative, C. C. F. and New Democracy parties also agitated on a national unity program, these parties are now in the position where they are forced by their previous statements to follow Mr. King. So that the situation as it exists at the present time would seem to indicate that while Mr. King is faced with a defection of Quebec M. P.'s within his own party, he can count upon the support of the opposition as well as the English-speaking members of his own party to see that his proposals pass victoriously in the House of Commons.

The political opposition, to be sure, must find itself in an embarrassing position, having to support Mr. King, but the Prime Minister is a shrewd calculator of political currents and he must be sure of his strength otherwise he would not have acted as decisively as his Monday proposals indicated.

Peru Curbs Japanese

By Virginia Prewett

Economy Fortifies Internal Stability

THE RECENT SERIES of agreements between Peru and the United States implementing resolutions on hemisphere security made at the Rio conference have paramount significance because Peru is the South American country Japan had selected as the place to lay a deep ground-plan for economic and political penetration. Peru's economic pattern and racial make-up appeared to make it ideal for the Japanese approach. By geographical position also it is the most strategic place in South America for penetration from the East.

Peru's northern coast, where large numbers of Japanese have gone to live in the past decade, is the South American west coast's "bulge," comparable to Brazil's Natal region. A Japanese control there would paralyze Peru and Chili, to the south. From deep-water harbors along this coast and from Peruvian airfields, both Ecuador and Colombia could be attacked and the Panama Canal struck at with ease. At Talara, almost on the tip of Peru's "bulge," 80 per cent of Peru's 40,000-barrel a day oil production is centered. On a stark cliff not far north of Talara stands the only gasoline refinery on the South American west coast. It supplies this region and supplements Argentine imports.

PERU PRODUCES many other war materials. It is the world's first exporter of vanadium and our chief import source. It is second Latin American source of copper and zinc. In 1936 Japan's purchases of copper leaped from 1 per cent to nearly 30 per cent of the total. Peru is the world's fifth producer of antimony and a source of British supply. Recently small amounts of mica, tin ore, tungsten, lead,—materials with a heavy war stress—have been exported.

Peru also produces some crude quinine, a drug Bataan proved as vital as bullets. Java's fall cut off the source of 97 per cent of our imports. Flax, dry cattle hides, goat and kid skins, kapok, all critical imports, come from Peru in small but important quantities. Peru once briefly held second place as Latin-American mercury source for us and output can be increased. Over a million pounds of crude rubber, now more important to us than gold, came out of Peru in a recent peak year. Peru also exports cotton and sugar.

With mining and transportation equipment from us and ships to haul goods in, these products can be supplied in greater quantities. This, of course, depends upon Peru's continued internal stability, which in turn depends to a remarkable degree on the fate of one export commodity.

Mineral exports compose 65 per cent of Peru's exports. Sugar accounts for 7 per cent, cattle products for around 7 per cent and cotton for about 18 per cent. Mineral production is foreign owned. The United States has a 100-million-dollar direct and a 50-million-dollar indirect investment there. The extractive industries return substantial tax revenues and support the transportation industry, but less than 2 per cent of Peru's gainfully employed work in mines and oilfields. Nine-tenths of the Peruvian people depend directly or indirectly on agriculture.

Peru's agriculture economy has an unusual structure, due in part to its unusual geography. Its 1400-mile-long and 25-to-100-mile-wide coastal plain is a rainless desert, stark and magnificent to see, but habitable only in 50 or more widely separated valley oases where Andean rivers provide irrigation. Some rain on the high western slopes of the Andes, the Peruvian sierra, make agriculture possible there, but irrigation is still necessary in places. The eastern Andes slopes, that run down into the upper Amazon basin, are heavily watered and fertile. This wilderness region is Peru's hope for the future.

THREE-FOURTHS of Peru's people live in the sierra. They grow food crops and sell their surpluses to the coast valleys, which grow little food for themselves. Chief coast products are export sugar and cotton. Sugar-raising is owned by outside interests, as is mining. Thus the money returns from cotton means most to coast agriculture and to the sierra agriculture pyramided on it. Cut out foreign cotton sales and Peru's economy collapses.

The Axis has fully realized that cotton is the key to Peru. During the middle 30's, Germany tried and partially succeeded in gaining influence there by crowding out Britain as cotton purchaser. Though Peruvian home industry is reducing its dependence on foreign imports, it can supply only about 40 per cent of domestic needs. Peru still has to import all heavy-industry products, many food items and consumer articles. Germany bought cotton and sold them cheap manufactures.

The Japanese moved in in the middle thirties and began to work cotton land in coast valleys. They established heavy colonization between Lima, the capital, and the strategic north. Gradually they maneuvered into strategic positions in Peru's economy. With small truck lines, they acted as middlemen to sell sierra products in coast valleys. They started truck-gardens in coast valleys and created a food dependence there. They opened tiny grocery stores and dealt with the very poor. They spread the idea of racial kinship between themselves and Peru's Indian element. They opened barber shops, next to bars as the poor man's club. The blacklist in Lima set even the American and English colonies to shaving at home.

When Germany could no longer take Peruvian cotton and deliver goods, through 1940, Peru saw crisis ahead. Japan quickly stepped in as savior. Their negative trade balance turned in Peru's favor and skyrocketed past our own. Through 1941 they continued to buy cotton and made heavy purchases from Peru's small home-owned mining industry. When I was in Lima between the time of Pearl Harbor and the Rio conference, Japan was using the propaganda trick of offering to buy copper for future delivery. Japanese ships would be sailing in and out of Peruvian harbors at will in the summer of 1942, they promised.

WHEN PERU broke relations as the result of Rio, Japan's plans were paralyzed. Our subsequent agreement of lease-lend aid (March 11), the Hull-Dasso Notes on strategic materials and control of Axis activity (April 23) and the trade agreement of April 7 were successive steps to strengthen Peru's hand against Japan.

Vital to Peru's future will be United States loans and materials for internal development, yet it was expressly stated in the notes "that the United States cannot undertake to furnish machinery and equipment in short supply due to the exigencies of war . . ." Even more vital to Peru's stability is our agreement to supply their small strategic imports needs and to purchase their cotton surplus for the duration of the war.

Analysis of the agreements as a whole reveals that they go beyond stop-gap measures for the present emergency and provide a way for permanent solutions. The strongest Axis argument in Latin America is that essential exports—in Peru the vital cotton—compete with our products. This does not hold good at present, since Peru's cotton surplus is a drop in the bucket of our cotton needs and the limit of cotton's use in our war economy is not in sight. But Peru, like other countries, has very naturally asked what its fate will be when the present abnormal demand ceases. Peruvian leaders, among them cabinet ministers, with whom I talked in Lima just before Rio, reiterated this question persistently.

Events provided the answer. Even the general public now knows how dangerous was our dependence on southwest Pacific sources for rubber, quinine and a dozen other raw materials essential to our industrial civilization. Under the new agreements, American loans and American technicians will assist Peru to develop some of these products. While stop-gap measures are proving a defense asset to both countries, permanent noncompetitive exports to us will be developed as fast as possible. This will add to our security and will help relieve Peru from bondage to the cotton economy.

AS THIS was being worked out in Washington, Peru put into effect stringent measures to curtail Japanese mischief-making. Japanese have been under police control since shortly after Pearl Harbor. The Peruvian government will consult with ours on what to do about Japanese cotton growers, by agreement in the notes.

The Peruvian situation, for which Tokyo planned so long and which the Japanese apparently had so well in hand, can afford them little cause for self-congratulation today.

Peru's guaranteed economic stability and its government's open opposition to Japanese machinations reduce to a minimum Japan's chances to upset Peru internally. A low-lying cloud-cap shrouds Peru's long coast far out to sea during coming months, Peru's winter. It is possible that the Japanese might count on this to favor a punitive token raid or surprise blow against Peru. If they do, it is also within bounds of possibility that they will encounter other surprise factors to upset calculations. Military consultations for hemisphere security grew out of Rio as did economic measures and the Inter-American Defense Board is a functioning reality. Their decisions are of course necessarily secret.

Gas Ration Quiz

Q. My auto has practically no tires, its inner tubes are all patched up; the battery is about dead, the radiator leaks and somebody has just stolen the gas. Is it still a vehicle within the meaning of the rationing orders?

A. Unfortunately, yes. You look to us like a B minus case.

Q. I am a hard-working man and am on the job all the time, except when in a new ration-card line-up. The shop is 10 miles from my home. I got into debt to buy a flivver to make the trip and I have ten payments still to make. I know I am entitled to an A card, but would I save worry by buying a bike?

A. Well, you have a good idea, mister

Q. I am loaded down with cards, permits, etc. Because the tailor couldn't put patch pockets in my last suit I have no room for any more and I can't buy a bag because of the ceiling on leather and zippers. What would you suggest?

A. You might buy a truck and get in under a commercial vehicle rating.

* * * *

Q. If I cannot get gas in my car, can I get it in a can, or can I not?

A. Speak more clearly; we're a little confused.

Q. My wife got a B card entitling her to more than 21 gallons for the 47-day period. The best I could do was an A card limiting me to 21. How come?

A. Women have a way with them; don't they, though!

Q. My car burns so much gas I am always out of it. May I use my little boy's outboard motor allowance?

A. Don't bother your Government with family problems.

Q. My wife insists I can get a preferred rating by saying I am a horse doctor. She says that if it is necessary to prove it I can carry around a dead horse. Does this impress you?

A. Not much. Try a sick dog.

* * * *

Q. Now that ministers are allowed "X" cards, is it all right if I send for Uncle Gideon, a retired missionary, to come and live with us?

A. Some people think of the darnedest dodges.

Q. On my way to the ration board a man called me a dirty osteopath. At least, it sounded like that. If he is right I am entitled to an "X" card. Do I have to prove him wrong?

A. This is a tough decision to make.

Q. I am a border-line case, but the chairman of my ration board is a man whose fenders I once tore off. After the accident I made faces at him. What are my chances on an appeal for more gas?

A. Don't be silly.

Q. My radiator is so full of leaks that when my car is under way it seems to be casting up sea spray. It also rolls a lot. Do you think I could get extra gas as a Coast Guard auxiliary?

A. It will be tried by somebody; why not you?

Fair Enough

Senate, Not House, Shirks Labor Duty

FOR SOME strange reason, probably psychological, the statesmen of our House of Representatives appear to be held responsible by the public for the absence of any laws to establish legal control of those fabulously rich and powerful political organizations commonly known as labor unions. The fact is, however, that the lower house has been very spirited in its fight to retain for the national legislature the law-making function assigned to Congress in the American system of government. It is the Senate which has repeatedly blocked such reforms. The Senate is our Reichstag, obedient to the executive and political power of the party leader and in this particular affair the Senate is protecting a gigantic political racket which has a total income sufficient to buy all the elections in the country if properly administered and provided the thieves in union office do not steal too much. The Senate is a very arrogant organization, blown up with pomposity and indifferent to the will and interest of the people. Senators are contemptuous toward the rabble whose votes put them where they are because they enjoy a much longer term and thus greater job security.

PEGLER

They are much more sensitive concerning their prerogatives than they are about their duties and they gang up together, as members of a rather snooty club, to favor one another at the expense of the governmental system of which they are, at the present writing, a very discreditable unit. They are, in a sense, ambassadors of their respective States at the center of the national Government, whereas the Congressmen are intimately of the people and much more responsive to the popular will.

THE WILL of the people with regard to rackets and much other corruption in the unions was expressed twice in the lower house in the passage of bills which would have placed responsibility on these irresponsible and, in many ways, criminal power groups. Even Democrats in the lower house voted against the power of the White House and the political terrorists of the unions, but the Senate has permitted both bills to be smothered in the Committee of Labor at the request of the Administration.

What did these bills propose? They proposed nothing harmful to labor. On the contrary, they were designed to protect rank and file workers and the whole country from the union bosses and to frustrate the obvious design of the President's party to establish as a permanent power a sub-government, richer in cash wealth than any other interest, and responsible to no authority but obedient to the President as its political protector. The connection between these unions, whose terroristic practices are well known and comparable to those of Adolf Hitler's Brown Shirts and the governing party has finally been asknowledged by Attorney General Biddle.

AND, OF COURSE, all members of both houses of Congress know the membership of the unions is largely captive and involuntary. Looking back now they can see that the so-called Wagner Act, which was not the work of Senator Wagner at all but a party act, was used not so much to enable workers to select their bargaining agents as to drive them into unions and, actually, to make them accept bargaining agents selected for them by the governing party.

The House has tried to break up this gigantic plot to destroy the American form of government and bleed the people of the money with which to pay for their own chains, but the Senate has thwarted all attempts by the negative process of killing the bills in committee. Thus, most of the individual Senators may escape responsibility for active participation in the betrayal.

In view of the record, the candidates for reelection to the lower house deserve intelligent hearing rather than mass repudiation by the voters. If a Congressman did vote for these reforms his vote should be given consideration and the fact should be considered also that the lower house is far superior to the Senate in character and political honesty.

By tradition or superstition the Senate has always been regarded as the upper house and the people, sometimes instinctively, blame the Representatives for failures which are not chargeable to them. Probably the reason is that the lower house is so close to the people, but in this case it cannot be said that the Congressmen threw their country down.

Effort At Truth In News Broadcasts Winning Propaganda Battle For U. S.

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, May 13.—American can countries than all the stations short-wave radio is winning the propaganda battle of the air waves in Latin America because it has better programs than the Axis nations.

The Nation's most important propagandist is the President.

Next in importance are the accurate dispatches of the country's news agencies.

This appraisal of the job short-wave radio is doing to help win the war was made today by Guy Hickok of New York, erstwhile foreign correspondent who now is connected with the radio section of the Inter-American Affairs Office.

"Our 12 short-wave stations are going farther to please, persuade and win the favor of Latin-American countries than all the stations operated by Germany, which spends more than 160 million dollars a year for such propaganda," said Hickok at the National Association of Broadcasters' Covention.

"German programs catch attention, but after listening to them a while, you can visualize what they're going to say next. The broadcasts are full of lies and contradictions.

"I have heard of many South American audiences saying they would believe nothing until they heard it on a United States broadcast. South America is propaganda-wise. You can't fool its people any longer because they've heard the Axis barrage so many years."

House Group Votes Subsidy To Firms Caught In Cost-Price Ceiling Squeeze

By John W. Henderson
Associated Press Staff Writer

Members of the Senate Banking Committee disclosed yesterday they had recommended that the Reconstruction Finance Corp. be empowered to subsidize businesses that might be caught in a "squeeze" between price ceilings and rising costs.

Committeemen said they had incorporated such authority in legislation which they approved Tuesday to increase the RFC's borrowing power by five billion dollars.

Under the amendment, the RFC would be authorized at the request of the Price Administrator and with approval of the Secretary of Commerce to:

"Make payments in conjunction with the production, procurement, processing, servicing, or distribution of any article or commodity for the purpose of stimulating production or holding down prices, and to purchase, acquire, carry, sell, or otherwise deal in any article or commodity."

The agency would be granted specific authority to sell at a loss.

Chairman Wagner (Democrat) of New York, said the authority was sought by the Administration in order to maintain distribution of certain commodities where costs might rise too high to permit a profit under ceiling prices.

For example, he said, lack of barges would make it necessary to transport large amounts of coal into New England by rail at a cost much higher than formerly, so that under the ceiling prices unless relief were provided dealers would be forced to absorb the higher cost, as would manufacturers depending upon coal for power in competition with industries in other regions.

Under the proposed authority, Wagner said, the RFC could pay the difference in transportation cost, thereby spreading the increase over the entire Nation instead of a single section and avoiding hardship on consumers.

The measure would prevent "exorbitant prices," he said, and "the inflation we are all trying to avoid."

Senator O'Mahoney (Democrat) of Wyoming, contended that the proposal showed the need for fixing ceilings on all costs instead of using "piecemeal" controls, a system which he asserted was ineffective in preventing inflation.

"It would be vastly preferable, more understandable and less likely to lead to unforseen complications," O'Mahoney said, "to adopt an all-over price-freezing policy affecting costs as well as selling prices."

Norfolk Is First To Go Over Top In USO Drive

Richmond, Va., May 13 (AP).—Virginia "is proud to have been the first American city of over 100,000 to exceed its U. S. O. war fund goal," John Stewart Bryan, chairman of the Virginia State U. S. O. war fund campaign, said today in announcing that Norfolk had exceeded its quota by 119 per cent on the basis of present reports.

Final figures are expected to put the Norfolk fund at 122 per cent of its quota, it was said.

"Through Norfolk's generosity," Bryan added, "U. S. O. will receive over $78,000, and it is likely that the final figures will push this sum to over $80,000. I hope that this wholehearted support of U. S. O. will be matched by every community in the State when our campaign gets underway on June 1."

Plans for the State-wide drive will be completed at a series of meetings during this week and next when State campaign leaders will meet with district and local chairmen in each of the State's nine Congressional districts.

Alpha Delta Pi Chapter House To Mark Founding of First Sorority

NINETY-ONE years ago tomorrow the first secret society in the world for college women was founded at Wesleyan College, Macon, Ga., the world's first chartered college for women. It was called the Adelphean Society. It is now the Alpha Delta Pi Sorority.

The anniversary of this founding will be celebrated Sunday morning at 10:30 o'clock with a program and coffee hour at the Alpha Delta Pi chapter house at the University of Maryland. Participating will be the Washington alumnae association of the sorority and the college chapters of George Washington University and the University of Maryland.

A historical style show depicting the fashionable attire of Alpha Delta Pi members in 1851, 1880, 1904, 1924 and 1942 will be presented.

For the first time in the history of the Washington alumnae group, the occasion will be a benefit, proceeds going to the sorority's War Relief Fund. Members here are foregoing their usual Founders' Day banquet or breakfast so that the money may be contributed to war relief work.

Mrs. Ormand E. Demorest is chairman of the committee arranging the celebration Sunday. Assisting are: Mrs. F. Norman Hearn, Mrs. James Kirkland, Mrs. Carlos Greenleaf, Mrs. Frank Kendrick, Miss Louise Grotlisch, Mrs. William Clark, Mrs. Perrin Lowrey, Mrs. Ralph Erskine, Mrs. John McDonald, Mrs. W. H. Bain and Miss Mary Lou Brown and Miss Elizabeth Webster, undergraduates at the University of Maryland and George Washington University, respectively.

Mrs. Eugene V. Clendenin, president of the Washington Alumnae Association, Miss Anna Bean, president of the George Washington University chapter, and Miss Anne Auslund, president of the chapter at the University of Maryland, will greet members Sunday morning. Mrs. Clendenin will present the alumnae association's annual scholarship award to the undergraduate in each chapter having the highest grades for the last year.

Alumnae newly arrived in the Capital are asked to call Mrs. Kirkland, Mrs. Kendrick or Mrs. Greenleaf to make reservations.

O. and a former first vice president of the chapter, Mrs. Fohrman, succeeds Mrs. T. A. Hutton as president.

She was installed by Mrs. Howard E. Simpson of Grand Rapids, North Dak., first vice president of the Supreme Chapter, who was the principal speaker at the annual convention. Mrs. Simpson presented Mrs. Hutton, the retiring president, with credentials for a seat in the Supreme Chapter.

Other officers elected and installed were: Miss Jane Mackay Anderson of Chapter J., first vice president; Mrs. Ward M. Buckles of Chapter N. second vice president; Miss Jessie O. Elting of Chapter B, organizer; Miss Alma Barry of Chapter O, recording secretary; Mrs. W. Travis Hall of Chapter M, corresponding secretary; Mrs. William L. Clarke of Chapter T, treasurer.

The chapter passed an amendment to its by-laws to permit three chapters istead of two to serve as hostess chapters for the annual convention. The chapters entertaining the convention next year will be O, P and Q.

The delegation was elected at the business meeting of the club yesterday at the Willard Hotel. Mrs. Jean Bennett, president of the American Federation of Soroptimist Clubs, gave a talk on the coming convention. She announced that the International Convention of Soroptimist Clubs, which was to have been held in London, after the convention in Cleveland, had been abandoned on account of world conditions, but said a conference of Soroptimist Clubs of England and Ireland would be held in London, and that on July 4 an International Day would be held in honor of the clubs of America. Miss Elizabeth Hawes, a former president of the London club, now liaison secretary of the European Federation of Soroptimist Clubs, will preside at this event.

Reports on the club's scholarships awards were made by Mrs. Rose Cohen, chairman of the vocational guidance committee.

10% in District Get 'X' Gas Cards

Inquiries on the subject were referred to Fred Chait, chief counsel for the gasoline rationing section, OPA, but office aides there said he was in conference and could not be disturbed.

Whitney Leary, OPM director for the District, took note of the large number of "X" cards issued here by pointing out what he called the apparent "confusion regarding those eligible to legally apply" for them. The issuance of such cards is authorized, he said, "only if all or substantially all of the use of the vehicle in question is certified by the applicant to be for the official business of a Federal, State, local or foreign government, agency. A car is deemed used for official business only to the extent that it is actually driven on Government business in carrying out the functions of the particular agency or office."

Indignation Grows

He advised that persons who have received an "X" card under "an erroneous or mistaken interpretation of the intent of the regulation" may return the card and apply for another "of the proper class."

Indicative of the growing indignation over the issuance of the "X" cards was a statement by organized labor officials declaring that "the spectacle of thousands of citizens clamoring for unlimited gas rationing cards for nonessential driving, and getting them, is a disgrace to the spirit of equal sharing for victory."

The statement bore the signatures of Joseph Curran, S. H. Dalrymple and Emil T. Rieve, presidents, respectively, of the National Maritime Union, the United Rubber Workers of America and the Textile Workers Union.

Hundreds of Seamen Dead

"Already hundreds of American merchant seamen," they said, have died in the "hazardous trade" of bringing gasoline to the Eastern seaboard in tankers. "Are they to continue dying simply in order to gratify the convenience of those who cannot face the hardship of using public transit?"

The OPA reminded all motorists that applications for ration cards will be subject to checking, and warned that falsification of data will be severely punished.

Longer Hours and No School

Cantrell's office, in announcing that the registration would be carried out today from 10 a. m. to 8 p. m., instead of beginning at 3 p. m. as was the case yesterday and Tuesday, said that there will be no classes in any public school—making today a holiday for the students but practically anything but that for the 3000 teachers and other school personnel engaged in issuing the cards.

Last night Cantrell said that yesterday's registration, on the basis of reports which he had received up to 8 p. m., was "much heavier" than Tuesday's.

However, it was carried out, he declared, with far less confusion and with none of the grand rush that characterized the initial day of the signup when irate motorists, many of whom had been standing in line for several hours, were turned away from the registration centers at the 8 p. m. closing hour.

Cantrell attributed the increasing familiarity of the registrars with their work with helping yesterday's registration proceed smoothly.

Complication Arises

An interesting point raised during the registration yesterday concerned the issuance of ration cards to people who may be using cars belonging to, and registered in the names of, service men on foreign duty.

It was pointed out that persons unable to get to the registration centers may designate someone to act as their agent, provided the agent has the registration card, but the ration card is issued solely for the use of the owner of the car.

OPA regulations make no provision for the issuance of ration cards to people who may be using automobiles belonging to someone else, and the only way for people in this category to get their cards, Cantrell's office stated, is to explain the situation to the District Rationing Board which will make the necessary arrangements.

Cantrell said that his reports indicated that no one was turned away last night.

Fewer "X" Card Applications

Cantrell revealed, also, that there had been a "very decided drop" in the number of people making application for the "X" ration cards, but the actual number of such cards issued cannot be determined until the registrars submit their reports this morning.

Whether the decrease in the "X" applications was due to the fact that the majority of people wanting such cards had made it a point to come in on Tuesday, or whether it was due to newspaper publicity regarding the large number of "X" cards issued, Cantrell was unable to say.

Among those who went to the Harrison School at Thirteenth and V Streets Northwest to obtain ration cards yesterday was Mrs. Leon Henderson, wife of the price czar. She secured two "A" cards, one for herself and the other for her husband, placing them both in the nonessential class or with those who drive less than 6 miles a day in connection with their work.

Henderson Drives 2.9 Miles

Henderson determined that the shortest route from his residence at 2121 Bancroft Place Northwest to his office at Fourth Street and Independence Avenue was 2.9 miles. Had the route been one-tenth of a mile longer he could have qualified for a B-1 card.

Registration for the heads of District government departments was held yesterday in Room 508 of the District Building, where only two "X" cards were issued, one to Dr. George C. Ruhland, health officer, and the other to Mrs. Agnes Mason, member of the ABC Board. Mrs. Mason's husband is a physician and she uses the car with him jointly.

Commissioners Guy Mason and C. W. Kutz both asked for and received A cards. All the other cards issued there fell into one or the other B classifications.

The ratio in which ration cards were issued here indicated the possibility that OPA might be forced to revise the 3-gallon unit on which the program here and in 17 Eastern states is based.

This unit was set up, it was stated yesterday, on a basis of the amount of gas available and on the assumption that one-third of the 8,500,000 car owners in the area would get a cards, with the other two-thirds receiving the other type cards.

Registrants receiving A cards here Tuesday constituted appreciably less than the one-third of the total which the OPA estimated would be the case. However, OPA said it had no figures yet on which to determine whether the discrepancy evident here in Tuesday's registration was general throughout the area.

The Hendersons Get 'A' Cards

MRS. LEON HENDERSON, wife of the price administrator and boss of gas rationing, displays the two "A" cards—which weer issued to her yesterday at the Harrison School, Thirteenth and V Streets Northwest. The cards will limit the supply of gas for the old sedan her husband uses and the car she drives for registration of Capitol employes, told The Post that "about" 47 Congressional secretaries received "X" cards Tuesday. Many more secretaries wanted the cards, but were denied them, Dr. Strawbridge said, but added that about as many were "perfectly willing" to receive "A" and "B" cards entitling them to from 21 to 57 gallons for the 47-day rationing period.

Congressmen Stung by Criticism of Obtaining Unlimited Gas

5. In a prelude to the indignant outburst on the House floor, Speaker Rayburn expressed to reporters his resentment at the manner in which newspapers treated gasoline rationing at the Capitol. Referring to statements from Office of Price Administration officials declaring that their positions did not entitle Congressmen to "X" cards, Rayburn announced that, henceforth, all OPA statements will be issued by Henderson.

Wilson, the man with the unfinished speech, was halted in the middle of his prepared text by the tactics of Representative Hoffman (Republican) of Michigan, who recently was summoned before the District grand jury in connection with its investigation of Axis agents.

As the Indianan began to assail the Congressional attitude toward gasoline rationing as "hardly a credit to men in our positions," Hoffman moved that the words be taken down, a preliminary to expunging them from the Congressional Record. Hoffman maintained that Wilson was challenging the "good faith" of Congress.

Wilson paused, then started to read the next sentence in his speech. Hoffman then made a point of no quorum.

Representative Dingell (Democrat) of Michigan, who was acting as majority leader, moved adjournment and the handful of members present filed out of the chamber.

"Some of you have said that you needed your cars and unlimited gasoline supplies for your 'work'; I am afraid that is an excuse, which is hardly a credit to a man in our positions," Wilson said.

As far as the Congressional Record is concerned, Wilson's speech ended there. Had he been permitted to continue, he would have said:

"Even school children grow expert at alibis, but men, especially leaders in a country at war should never offer them as reasons . . .

"Gentlemen, you aren't hurt yet, but the day the press of this country is stopped from printing its opinions freely, is a day you'll have reason to wail. So why don't we quit our damned bellyaching and start acting like interested Americans, and exercise our privilege of 'giving' toward the Victory program.

"This war can't be won while anyone rolls merrily down our highways on balloon tires, with full gas tanks and an American flag on the radiator cap."

The House was angrier yesterday than it has been since the unhappy days preceding repeal of so-called pensions for Congressmen last February. A half dozen members took the floor with defiant jibes at newspapers and bitter attacks on Government "bureaucrats" for "attempting to govern Congress." These members were allowed to finish their speeches. They also were loudly applauded.

Representative Hebert (Democrat), of Louisiana, who came to Congress from the city editorship of the New Orleans States, the paper that "broke" the Louisiana scandals, declared:

"Unless something is done to curb that section of the press which holds in ridicule the keystone of the democracy which allows it free speech, our whole system of Government is going to collapse. It is about time that we members of Congress take cognizance of it and let the Nation know whether we are men or mice."

The press and "bureaucrats downtown" were reminded by Representative Faddis (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, that it is a "part" of a Congressman's "official duties" to "go back home and talk to the man on the street corner." Faddis said he has an "X" card and "no apologies to make for it."

"There are those in this Nation," Faddis declared, "who would like to destroy and discredit all representative government, and I fear this is but a part of that campaign."

Who is Leon Henderson, asked Representative Ford (Republican), of California, to "determine the duties of Congress?" Ford declared that "any half-baked idiot should know that automobiles today have been necessary to carry on all business. He wanted to know what would happen to Congress if this form of transportation were taken away

Representative Cannon (Democrat), of Missouri, Appropriations Committee chairman, said newspaper reports would have "a serious effect on Congress," while Representative D'Alesandro (Democrat), of Maryland, assailed newspapers for "inflammatory" reports.

Representative Rich (Republican), of Pennsylvania, warned the House that its gasoline troubles were typical of the things Congressmen could expect from Government bureaus after wholesale delegation of congressional power.

The Congressional storm had barely subsided when word reached the Capitol that Henderson was preparing a statement, the second in two days to come from OPA anent Congress. While it was generally interpreted as supporting Congressional holders of "X" cards, it contained two sentences which appeared to invite conscience-stricken members to exchange these cards for "A" or "B" cards, good for 21 to 57 gallons for the 47-day rationing period. These were the sentences:

"Persons who have received an "X" card under an erronous or mistaken interpretation of the intent of the regulation, may return the "X" card to any registration place and apply for a card of the proper class.

"I am relying on the 'good faith and patriotism of those who hold "X" cards to see to it that the privilege is not abused for private use."

"The Capitol Line"

Dr. George M. Rawlins, jr., head of the science department in Washington public schools, who is in charge of congressional registration facilities at the Capitol, estimated that of about 400 Representatives and Senators registered in the last two days, approximately 250 received "X" cards.

About 30 Congressmen received "X" cards yesterday, he said, while a few legislators came back and exchanged "X" cards for "A" or "B" cards.

Meanwhile, at Stuart Junior High School, a gathering of about 15 persons stood at an entrance, apart from several hundred who waited in a line extending on three sides of the building. One of the smaller group's members called it "the Capitol line." It was made up of Capitol employes.

Shift in Nation's Food Habits Would Insure More Energy

By Ida Jean Kain

THE BOYS in our fighting forces are not complaining. None of the ones I have talked to are. They feel too good to kick!

As one lad put it 'I'd always heard we were supposed to hate going to bed and getting up with the chickens. And we were all expecting to beef about the meals. But since I signed up four months ago I've put on 20 pounds—something I'd never been able to do—and I feel better than I ever have in my life."

If meals high in the protective foods are good for our soldiers, they are just as good for the civilians. It is up to every one of us to voluntarily put ourselves on a program to keep fit—anyway for the duration. We've got to get up in the morning with that lick-the-world feeling. This is a war we have got to win.

Work Against Time

We have to work against time that takes the extra energy that comes only with the right nutrition. If we could make a major shift in our national food habits to include a higher percentage of the protective foods, we could raise our health average almost to optimum within one short year.

Think of what this would mean in health and efficiency. Not only is the feeling of well being stepped up until a person is roaring to work but there is an actual extension of the productive years. Instead of being at his peak at 40, a man can be going strong at 50.

It isn't more food that is needed, it's more of the right kind of food. We don't need more sugar, starch and fat in our three meals a day, but more protein, minerals and vitamins. These come in the protective foods—milk, eggs, cheese, butter, fresh fruits and vegetables, 100 per cent whole grain bread and cereals or the new enriched variety, and in meats, fish and fowl.

Eat Adequate Breakfast

We don't have to make any radical changes in the American dietary. As it stands, breakfast is apt to be the least adequate meal. You can't do a good morning's work on coffee and a sweet roll. You get nothing but starch and stimulation from that breakfast. Leave off the roll and have 100 per cent whole wheat toast, and add an egg and fruit juice and you've got a balanced meal. And a sandwich, coffee and dessert lunch is lacking in protection. Have a green salad with your sandwich, fresh fruit for dessert and milk for your beverage.

The favorite dinner of meat, potato, pie and coffee is nowhere near adequate. To it should be added a green leafy or yellow vegetable, whole grain bread and milk or cheese. If the dessert brings the calorie total up too high, that's what should be left off. Milk, green vegetables and whole grains are the essential foods missing from the average menus. All the protective foods must be included in the daily dietary if we are to shift into high gear and stay there.

Dancing Called Aid to Poise

Hollywood, Calif.—If it has been heard once, it has been heard a hundred times on the Warner Bros. lot that it is simply amazing that Alexis Smith, as young as she is, has the poise and assurance of the established stars of Hollywood.

When asked on the set of "The Constant Nymph" just how she gained such charming self-control, Alexis unhesitatingly said, "Simply confidence in myself . . . Now, I know before you ask that you want to know how I mustered up this marvelous self-confidence.

"Confidence, to my way of thinking, is based on health, first of all. Years of devoted study of the dance, particularly ballet, has given me a strong, healthy body, and a feeling of complete confidence in any gestures that I might make, in the way I carry myself when I walk, in the way I sit down, enter or leave a room.

"I realize, of course, that not every girl is fortunate enough to be able to study dancing. But consistent exercise and regular sleeping habits will accomplish these same results. After all, the whole secret rests in relaxing your mind and body, in learning balance and coordination. Nervous habits like standing on the sides of your heels or biting your fingernails will disappear when you have body control.

"The second builder of confidence and poise is good grooming. You cannot be the calm, cool, collected 'non-rumpler' if your clothes are sloppy, your hair and makeup carelessly done. You may think you are exercising the greatest of self-control, but if your appearance belies the fact, just how do you think you can convince the onlooker of your poise?"

Mary Haworth's Mail

Although as Strongly Endowed With Biologic Urge As Man, Woman's Desire for Security Is Her Chief Reason for Marrying, Says Spokesman for Fair Sex

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am very interested in the discussion launched by your reply of May 6 to "Man Reader's" question, namely: how to cure his wife's indifference. I believe your readers can profit from a still deeper probe into the heart of a woman. Your correspondent of May 11 uncovers a half-truth when she says: "A woman may love deeply and loyally without thought of sex, a fact incomprehensible to the average husband——" But I think we must know why this is so, if we are to give "Man Reader" either help or consolation concerning his problem. There is nothing unusual in his problem, of course. It is common to many marriages.

Basically, women marry for security. And inasmuch as security means different things to different women, each chooses her husband for different reasons. Security, for some women, means worldly possessions, in ever-increasing amount. These women tie to the man who can keep the supply coming in. Other women must feel adored to feel secure. They want to be lavishly loved not only by their husband but by his whole family connection. They want to "belong" to his side of the house. Lack of emotional security in childhood is most often responsible for this. These are only two instances of what I mean. But I daresay there are as many varieties of "security-craving" as there are women; and when a wife ceases to be a satisfying companion to her husband, it is safe to assume that he has failed to provide her "security" needs.

However, even though woman's greatest emotional craving is for security (and, being a woman, I speak for women), I nevertheless believe she is as strongly endowed with the sexual or biological urge as man. (That is, if she is mentally and physically normal). Mother Nature, in her wisdom, would not have permitted any real discrepancy. I believe it is merely the subconscious artfulness of women that results in a surface appearance of chaste indifference to male aggression.

Of course, I have heard (what woman hasn't?) many wives say: "But I have outgrown that aspect of married love." In the last five years, three of my friends have confided in me this sanctimonious interpretation of their indifference to their husbands. Almost invariably, these self-eluding, security-seeking women will be found taking an active part in social and political affairs outside the home. Balked in their efforts to find inner security, within the framework of an exclusive heterosexual relationship, they turn their energies outward and continue the search. The human being must constantly bulwark his ego in order to be able to survive and cope with society. Male and female are alike in that. And while we must gratefully admit that many great social benefits have been wrought by persons "compensating" for inner lacks, of one kind or another—the fact still remains that a feeling of intrinsic security is the undefined goal of every individual's efforts.

Training, Not Nature, Stresses Sex Difference

WHEREIN, THEN, lies the difference—if any—between man and woman? I am not a psychiatrist; not even an amateur psychologist. I am only a woman, with a yen for self-knowledge. But so far as I can learn, the difference inheres in acquired reactions. For the most part, women's activities are different from men's and our training certainly is. Therefore, we react differently under identical circumstances.

To take a simple illustration: A man is accustomed to having his pet theories blasted or vigorously revised by his workaday associates; and he in turn deals out the same treatment. But if he tries to be equally honest with his wife's sometimes half-baked or ill founded notions, he is in for trouble—and how! Why? Beeause his wife, if she loves him, secretly reveres him as her superior, her infallible superior, to whom she looks for security. And how can she feel secure in relation to a man who even implies that he thinks her a fool? Others may scoff or smile at her serious thoughts without giving her distress—but never her husband.

Isn't this the reason why a man is rarely successful in teaching his wife to drive the family car? She is helplessly disconcerted to have him witness her clumsy efforts; and completely unnerved if he scolds her for them. One marriage I know was a dismal failure; yet it could have been extremely happy, if the husband had possesed the good sense to refrain from disputing every thought the poor woman had the misfortune to breathe aloud. The results in this case were precisely the same as in "Man Reader's." So you see, a woman's love —i. e., her expectation of security— can be blighted by so small a thing as a husband's light laughter, at the wrong time.

In conclusion, I suggest: If we women cannot educate our husbands to understand what we need of security, and expect them to supply—then we might adopt with profit the philosophy of Mrs. Heather, a character in "Castle on the Hill," a novel by Elizabeth Goudge. Reflecting on her husband's disappointing behavior, Mrs. Heather says: "And then I thought to meself, well, we're one; he has me an' naught can alter the fact that he has me, an' he's as fine a man as God ever made, so I'd best cease complainin', and let him do what he likes with what's his own." Sincerely,

N. G. D.

Cupid Is Indifferent To Women Past 40

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: My attention was caught by the heading on your article of May 9, to-wit: "Attractive woman, 33, ponders her misfortune in meeting only men 'on the make' in Washington. Is honorable companionship too much to expect?" You tell her, among other things, that "the town is swarming with men of her age-level, who are essentially as companionable and honorably disposed as a woman could wish for;" and add that "a reasonable number of them must be free to marry."

Perhaps you would be interested in some Washington statistics, based on a recent 12 months' study of 7352 marriages. Only 10 per cent of these marriages were contracted between women past 33 and men past 38. Fifty per cent of the marriages were between men 26 years of age or less, and girls 23 years of age or less. Only 1 per cent of the marriages were between women who admitted being 51 years of age or over; and men 60 or more years of age. Thus, it appears that by the time a woman is 40, her chances of finding a husband in Washington are pretty slim. Not more than one woman in 10 will make the grade, it appears.

About 13 per cent of the women marry men younger than themselves; 11 per cent marry men of identical age, and in the remaining bracket of 76 per cent, the man is the older—which may explain the high percentage of wives who outlive their husbands. According to this survey, local girls between 17 and 21 are in greatest demand as wives. After 21, the demand tapers off. Less than 3 per cent of brides canvassed in this query gave their age as 30. So, maybe you were a little too hard on "Wishful" when you told her that her failure to corral a husband here must be due to lack of magnetism or social mobility. It appears that the statistics are stacked against her. Sincerely,

STATISTICIAN.

Lilting Perfumes for Cottons

By Carolyn Abbott

You wouldn't dream of wearing a silver fox cape over a cotton frock, would you? You wouldn't wear high-heeled slippers with your garden overalls or slacks. For the same sound reasoning, you do not wear sophisticated wintry perfume with your freshly tubbed cotton dresses and play clothes.

Because this is the belief of Faberge, the parfumeur, he designed "Chambray," a perfume with a scent as gay as a May day—clean, young and lovable. To quote Faberge, "it's pert as a pigtail—for country courtin' and cavortin'."

Now that we are in the midst of May and cotton clothes are beginning to bloom like tulips, roses, valley lilies, there will be a longing to have perfume honor our crisp, sweet cotton frocks. Chambray—the perfume can fill that need. It comes in a flacon topped with the actual blue and white chambray fabric—the self-same kind as made our sunbonnets and rompers in kid days.

Made to match, there's also cologne, dusting powder and bath powder. All are in the spirit of spring, suitable for a nurses aid uniforms, overalls for the garden, golf cottons and cotton formals.

Fit Backyard for Family Fun To Offset Gasoline Rationing

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin

FUN in our own backyards will be the order of family recreation in this war year, what with transportation rationing and conservation plans. In place of those camping trips and picnic excursions, we'll be having barbecues and porch parties. It's certainly an inexpensive and agreeable way to spend the summer, and you'll be surprised haw much the family will enjoy it.

Actually you'll find it pleasanter yourself not to have to pull up for tiresome long drives and elaborate excursions. Backyard fun really can be achieved just by taking informal supper or Sunday breakfasts outdoors.

But look out that you plan well so that you will really be making less work for yourself instead of more. Eating outdoors can be a help or a hindrance to the lady of the house. The first thing on the list of musts would be trays—several big ones so that the "makings" of your outdoor spread can be carried out in the fewest possible number of trips. Paper plates and cups mean no dishwashing, but on the other hand they're expensive if you do this sort of thing often.

Dishwashing Easier

Eating outdoors requires less silver and china anyway than an indoors meal so, even with regular dishes and silver, the dish-washing job will be easier. Lots of times a menu of frankfurters or hamburgers or small steaks served on buns doesn't require plates—just some long handled forks or long handled individual broilers. Then all you'll need are cups for coffee or glasses for milk or soft drinks. Of course a fine green salad or a lusty potato salad in a wooden bowl is a good idea and then you'll need some kind of plates. Well—work that out in the simplest way you can—to suit your pocket-book and schedule.

Cooking outdoors may be done simply over an old-time camp fire, though some sort of grill arrangemen is a lot easier place to work. Outdoor stoves can be simple or elaborate . . . sometimes they are so fancy they require a chef and a couple of butlers to operate. But that's not the kind we have in mind . . . we're thinking of something that will put the old man to work with the children as assistants. He can buy a metal grid and build the stone or brick fireplace. Or you can use an old iron wash pot with sand in the bottom . . . build the fire on the sand . . . cook on a piece of wire mesh stretched across the top. Set the pot on a mound of stones so you won't have to stoop over so far to work.

Picnic Stoves

If you're feeling flush, you can buy a barbecue grill on wheels that has everything—including a revolving spit. Various simpler picnic stoves are also available for outdoor cooking. For more ambitious plans, you may want a barbecue grill table . . . this is a tile top table—very handsome with a barbeque pit and spit in one end or in the middle.

In equipping your home for fun this year, you will be right in the swing. For after years of being gadabouts, American families return eagerly to the hearty pleasures of home, to picnics in the backyard, to evenings of talk under the stars, to horse-shoe pitching and croquet and games of 'catch" among the men and boys. "Return" did I say? . . . well, that's not quite accurate, for truth to tell the majority of American families have never lost the feel of those forthright pleasures. Those who have are glad to come back home again.

Fit Your Clothes To Personality, Designer Advises

"Clothes should enhance your personality, not overshadow it," maintains Designer Edward Stevenson. This is the principle he always keeps in mind when designing the personal wardrobe of Columbia network's songstress Ginny Simms and for stars of RKO pictures, where he is head designer.

"The greatest test of a good studio designer is to have people say, 'I don't remember her clothes, but the performance was splendid,'" he believes. Women who remember this when selecting their clothes for business or pleasure will most certainly be rewarded with a similar compliment of, "I don't recall exactly what she wore, but she looked lovely."

When a dinner frock is too spectacular, people will be impressed by it rather than you. Learn to counterbalance the spectacular with the subdued. For instance, high colors call for simplicity of line and detail. And by the same token, if you choose navy blue or black, the style may be somewhat more elaborate. When wearing an ultra feminine hat with flowers, veiling and a combination of colors, by all means don the simplest of frocks. The focal point of your ensemble is the hat, and to wear a fussy dress would spoil the effect.

Let us put it this way. Clothes are a frame for your personality. Choose a style to show it off to best advantage.

Capital Whirl

Protocol Problems Puzzle Many Washington Hostesses; Informal Fetes Only Fool-Proof Solution

WITH WASHINGTON becoming more and more established as the World Capital, thorny problems of protocol are causing local hostesses plenty of trouble.

Time was, when any woman who had been around town for a year or so knew exactly who should sit above the salt at her table, and the order in which other guests should be placed . . . but that was long before the day defense chiefs, royalty, and even presidents in exile came to Washington for the duration.

House Speaker Rayburn

The puzzle of trying to figure out where to arrange place cards for the Vice President and Mrs. Wallace, House Speaker Rayburn, a Supreme Court Justice and a couple of Cabinet members, with perhaps a brace of Senators and Representatives thrown in for good measure, can be solved by reference to any of several standard books on Capital etiquette. (My own preference happens to be Anne Squire's "Social Washington.")

Suppose, however—just suppose—that you happened to have invited to dinner the Army Chief of Staff, the newly arrived Philippine President, House Speaker Rayburn, Crown Prince Olav and Crown Princess Martha of Norway, the Secretary of War, and a couple of Senators and their wives lined up as dinner guests? Are you sure you'd know just where to seat them?

State Department Won't Tell

More than likely you wouldn't; and if your reactions are average, you'd probably be calling the State Department's overworked Chief of Protocol, or somebody in his division, to help you out. Unless you're luckier than I was when I asked a question about relative ranks a couple of days ago, you won't get an answer.

What is the rank, if any, of members of the British Purchasing Commission? The New Zealand Supply Commission? Former French Premier Camille Chautemps? What about all the refugees with titles who have come to town, and settled down for the duration? Should Leon Henderson be seated below the First Secretary of Iran? Must the Military Attache of Thailand take precedence over Donald Nelson?

Leon Henderson

All books on Capital etiquette, while solving the problem nicely for the prewar Washington setup, are sadly lacking in information about protocol in the wartime Capital.

Not many unofficial persons, of course, will be fortunate enough to have so many foreign titles, refugee presidents, and local celebrities at their table that they won't be able to seat them. And any official who has such a celebrated company could turn the problem over to the State Department's protocol division.

The other day, however, I heard a dowager say she didn't trust the division of protocol any more.

"I was surprised to see in all the newspaper accounts of the White House dinner for President Prado in which the House Speaker's name was placed above that of the Secretary of State," she said, "I am sure the list, as used, was sent from the State Department, so, of course, the error was made there."

I looked at her in amazement. She has been around Washington long enough to know better. It seems incredible that anybody who gets about the Capital at all, socially or otherwise, would not know that the House Speaker ranks above the Secretary of State on all occasions except at events in foreign households, where an entirely different protocol is observed.

Speaker Prefers Informal Parties

Fact of the matter is, the accepted Order of Precedence as outlined by every authority in America places the House Speaker above Associate Justices of the Supreme Court, all foreign ministers, the Cabinet and the Senate. Not that House Speaker Rayburn cares a hang about any of this. He is not given to fol-de-rol and ceremonial display on any account. My private opinion is that he would be delighted if he never had to sit above the salt at another formal party in all his life. His idea of a good time has no connection with putting on evening clothes and stepping out to a starchy fete, where protocol is observed to the final detail, and everybody's chief concern is whether the ranking guest will keep his wits about him enough to know when to leave the party. Speaker Rayburn would far rather gather in a crowd of his House cronies for a fried chicken supper at which he dons an apron and does the cooking himself. Incidentally, he's not the only high-ranking official who enjoys turning chef now and then. Justice Hugo Black adores to cook steaks outdoors for a select group of friends.

I don't think many Washington hostesses have had the privilege of being bothered about where Crown Prince Olav and Crown Princess Martha should sit. The former is not around Washington much, and the latter limits most of her social engagements to the White House, her country's own embassy, and the households of members of the embassy staff.

Donald Nelson

Defense czars are much more available—and even more socially sought after in wartime Washington—than refugee royalty. Donald Nelson gets more dinner invitations each week than most other celebrities, foreign or domestic, receive in a month. The William L. Batts could dine out every night if they chose; and so could the Leon Hendersons. Important as each of these is, however, he has no prescribed rank, and according to the hidebound Washington Order of Precedence, Donald Nelson would sit

Newlyweds Are Guests of Mrs. Scanlon

House guests numbering three and a heavy schedule of war work are filling the days for Mrs. Martin Scanlan, wife of Brig. Gen. "Mike" Scanlon.

The Second Secretary of the United States Embassy at London, Grant Isaacs, has been her guest for about 10 days now, but expects to return soon to his duties in England. General Scanlon, who has been in Australia for the last two months, was formerly United States Military Attache to England.

Just arrived Tuesday from a honeymoon in New England are Group Captain and Mrs. Guy DuBoulay, who will be her house guests until they can move into their apartment at 3100 Connecticut Avenue. Mrs. DuBoulay is the former Mrs. Jane Botsford of New York. Very soon, although she has not chosen the exact day yet, Mrs. Scanlon plans a large reception and cocktail fete to honor her guests. Mrs. Scanlon has known the former Mrs. Botsford and her family for many years.

Mrs. Scanlon admitted having to take a short rest after her arrival in this country in October. She and the general were in London for six years—and had the windows blown out of their apartment seven times. In her spare time there Mrs. Scanlon served on the Dudley House Committee, which allotted to the neediest the contributions sent by the Red Cross and Bundles for Britain, was a nurse's aide and did some extra Red Cross work.

Now getting back into war work, but on this side of the ocean, Mrs. Scanlon will be hostess today to a meeting of the activities committee of the British War Relief Committee. The committee, which is under Mrs. Robert Low Bacon's chairmanship, is arranging for the five dolls sent here recently by the British princesses and a number of uniforms to be exhibited May 27 at Dumbarton Oaks.

Mrs. M. P. Embry To See Ships Launched Soon

Soon again the U. S. S. Parker and the U. S. S. Jenkins—namesakes, both, of Mrs. Marion Parker Embry's grandfathers—will see active duty on the high seas as did two identically named destroyers during World War I.

Mrs. Embry has gone to New York to attend the launching of the Parker, which is named in honor of her grandfather, the late Commodore Foxhall A. Parker. The sponsor of the vessel will be his daughter, Mrs. Edward Lloyd Winder.

Mrs. Embry herself will be the sponsor at the launching of the Jenkins, named in honor of her maternal grandfather, Rear Admiral Thornton A. Jenkins. The launching will be in June. The first Parker and Jenkins were in active service during the last war, and these new destroyers are the second to be so named.

The bride-elect is a member of one of Virginia's first families, being a niece of United States Senator Harry F. Byrd, Admiral Richard E. Byrd and Mrs. Henry D. Flood. She made her debut in 1938 at a dance given by her grandmother, Mrs. Richard E. Byrd, of Winchester, Va., at the Commonwealth Club in Richmond and at the Richmond german. Miss Byrd attended Garrison Forest School in Maryland and Gunston Hall.

Ensign Stimpson was graduated from Harvard in the class of 1937, where he was a member of the Owl's Club. He received his law degree from the University of Virginia in 1941 and at present is stationed with the Navy Department in Washington.

No date has been set for the wedding.

Norway's Prime Minister Guest Of Honor at Afternoon Fete

For the second time in as many days a group of Washingtonians were given a chance to meet the visiting Norwegian Prime Minister, Johan Nygaardsvold. Yesterday afternoon from 6 to 8 o'clock, Mr. and Mrs. George O. Mejlaender entertained at a party in his honor at their home in Thirty-fifth Street, and the afternoon before he had been feted at a large reception by the Norwegian Ambassador and Mme. Munthe de Morgenstierne.

Informal from first to last was the gathering yesterday of the Washington representative of the Norwegian Shipping and Trade Mission and Mrs. Mejlaender. The well-over-half-a-hundred guests came largely from shipping and military circles and much of the conversation centered around the magnificient work being done for the Allied cause by the Norwegian merchant marine.

The Norwegian Ambassador, who is just beginning to get used to his new title, and Mme. Munthe de Morgenstierne were among the guests as were the Danish Minister and Mme. de Kauffmann. The staff of the Norwegian Embassy was out in full force and there was more than a sprinkling of guests from the Maritime Commission and the War Department.

In the group were the Assistant Secretary of War and Mrs. John McCloy, Rear Admiral and Mrs. Emory S. Land, Rear Admiral and Mrs. Howard Vickery, Col. and Mrs. Corrin Strong, Col. Oscar Solbert, Col. and Mrs. Edward Curtis, Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Saugstad, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Burke, Mr. and Mrs. Chalmers Graham, Mr. and Mrs. Connant Brewer and a number of others.

The Prime Minister will leave tonight for Minneapolis, where he will speak on Saturday. Sunday, May 18, which is Norway's Independence Day, he will make an address in Duluth, Minn. From there he will go to the West Coast, where he is anxious to visit the places he lived during the first decade of this century when he was a construction worker on the Western railroads. After a swing through the Pacific States he will go to Canada to inspect Norwegian training centers there. Then he'll return to Washington about the first of June for a few days' visit. From the Capital he will return to his government-in-exile in London.

Party Planned For Bride-Elect

After rehearsing tonight for the ceremony Saturday in which Miss Hazel Eleanor Miller will exchange vows with LeRoy Bastin, Mr. and Mrs. William Frederick Miller, parents of the bride-elect, will be hosts at an informal buffet supper for members of the wedding party.

Guests will be Miss Helen Dolan, who will be Miss Miller's maid of honor; Otis Bastin, who will be best man for his brother, and Donald Meade and Leonard Doggett, ushers.

Mr. and Mrs. Miller are expecting Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Schaffer of New York to arrive tomorrow night or Saturday morning to be their house guests for the wedding, which will take place at the Woodside Methodist Church in Silver Spring at 7:30 Saturday night.

The bride-elect has been honored recently at a number of parties and showers, among them the fetes given by Mrs. Christine Balderson, Miss Helen Dolan, and her coworkers in the War Department. Mrs. Caroline Scott was hostess Tuesday night at a shower given by members of Sigma Epsilon Sorority, of which Miss Miller is a past grand chancellor.

Engagement Announced

Mr. and Mrs. Paul Stevens Pariejo of Montpelier, Vt., announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Lorraine Mae Pariejo of Washington, to William A. Davy of Washington. Miss Pariejo was graduated from St. Michael's High School in 1941.

Washington Greets Philippine President Quezon and Family

Reception for Chief-in-Exile and Cabinet to Take Place Soon

By Patricia Grady

Washington welcomed its first government-in-exile yesterday afternoon when President Manuel Quezon and two members of his Philippine cabinet arrived at the Union Station at 3:30 from San Francisco.

Straight to he White House, where they spent last night, went President Quezon, Mrs. Quezon and their three children, Maria Zeneida, Maria Aurora and Manuel, jr. Today they will move to the Shoreham to establish temporary headquarters until their plans for "duration permanency" can be made. Also received at the White House during the afternoon were Vice President Sergio Osmena, who was accompanied by his daughter, Maria; Gen. Basilio Valdes, Secretary of National Defense, and Col. Andres Sociano, Secretary of Finance.

Making his first venture out after an appendectomy was Resident Commissioner Joaquim M. Elizalde, who was on hand to meet his chief and accompany him to the Pennsylvania Avenue mansion. Commissioner Elizalde also holds the rank of Secretary of State for the Commonwealth. His wife was there to greet the Quezons at the station and his two daughters took time off from their classes to come to Washington for the arrival. Miss Elenita Elizalde came down from Manhattanville College and her sister, Cecelia, came in from the Sacred Heart Convent in Philadelphia. They will return to their studies in a few days.

Colonel Soriano saw his wife and children yesterday for the first time since war broke out. Mrs. Soriano and their three children, who came down from New York yesterday, were visiting in this country before the Japanese attack and will now make their home in the Capital. They are also at the Shoreham.

A number of officials met the Philippine President and his party yesterday afternoon, among them the Secretary of the Interior, Harold Ickes, Maj. Gen. Edwin M. Watson, and the Philippine High Commissioner and Mrs. Francis Sayre. The Assistant Secretary of the Interior, Oscar Chapman, accompanied the party back from San Francisco where he had gone to meet President Quezon.

The Philippine government is now ready to set up its headquarters here with its small cabinet all in Washington. Reorganizing its cabinet of nine after Manila was evacuated, it was made into a cabinet of four. The fourth cabinet member, Jose Abad Santos, is believed to have been captured by the Japanese during his flight from the besieged islands.

Though nothing has as yet been planned to give President Quezon's many Washington friends a chance to greet him, a reception probably will be held in the near future. The President, who has made many trips to America, was Philippine Commissioner here from 1909 until 1917.

Thompsons To Live in Glover Park

Mr. and Mrs. Emery Wells Thompson are currently on a wedding trip through the Southern States following their marriage here on Saturday. Upon their return they will make their home in Glover Park.

The bride is the former Miss Adele Ann Theophile, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Henry Theophile of Edgemoor, Md., and Mr. Thompson is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Emery John Thompson, of Washington.

Dr. Walter Price performed the 4 o'clock ceremony in the Northminster Presbyterian Church and a reception followed at the home of the bride's parents.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was gowned in white net fashioned with insets of chantilly lace. Her full length veil was held with a coronet of seed pearls and she carried a bouquet of orchids and lilies-of-the-valley.

Mrs. Arthur B. Groverman, the matron of honor wore a frock of lime green marquisette with shirred bodice and full skirt appliqued with daisies of the same material. Her headpiece was a small yellow velvet bow with long streamers and lace mitts to match the dress completed her costume. Her flowers were of yellow marguerites and lavender sweet peas. The bridesmaids, Mrs. Roger E. Needham, Mrs. George K. Payne, Mrs. John F. Thompson and Mrs Ballard Jamieson wore similar costumes in pale yellow.

Charles B. Thompson was his brother's best man and ushers were another brother, John F. Thompson, Robert Alcorn, George K. Payne and John Brostrup.

Works of Brazilian Sculptress Now on Exhibit at Museum

Washington Society has been taking time out from its perennial whirling the last few days to stop in at the National Museum for a view of the collection of some 15 likenesses of persons prominent in the official and social life of the Nation's Capital. All of them are the work of the Bolivian sculptress, Marina Nunez del Prado.

At the inaugural showing on Tuesday, Federal Security Administrator Paul V. McNutt stopped in for a few minutes to see what he looks like in cold plaster. Mrs. Harlan Stone was there to see the portrait of the Chief Justice, while Miss Mary Winslow, Mrs. Thomas Burke and Mrs. Thomas Hellwing viewed themselves as portrayed by Marina del Prado.

Vice President Wallace's head evoked much favorable comment among the many visitors, as did those of Mrs. McNutt, Senora de Guachalla, the wife of the Bolivian Ambassador; Jane Culbertson, and Ciro Alegria.

The exhibit will continue until May 30.

Archduke Is Protocol Problem

"What must I do about Otto?" an agonized hostess asked me over the telephone not long ago.

"Otto who?" I inquired. "And what about him?"

"Oh, Archduke Otto," she panted. "He's coming to dinner, and I've got a foreign minister and a Senator also coming. Where do I put Otto? To my right?"

I urged her not to do that. Told her that it seemed to me the pretender to a nonexistent throne should certainly be seated somewhere down the line after the Minister and Senator.

Archduke Otto

"But he's royalty!" she cried (as if I hadn't heard.) "I guess," she added, "I'd better call the State Department."

I never heard the end of the story. But no matter what advice she received, I wouldn't be surprised if Archduke Otto sat to her right after all . . .

Informal parties, which are more in keeping with the wartime tempo of entertaining than starchy affairs ruled by protocol, are the socially ambitious hostess' only fool-proof solution to the problem of who should sit above the salt at her dinners. When guests—diplomats, defense celebrities and even refugee royalty—are served from a buffet and then allowed to find seats for themselves at tables set up on the terrace or in the garden, nobody's going to bother about who sits on the right or left of host or hostess . . .

War is the great leveler—the world's most thoroughly democratic device, in fact—and most of us now have a lot more to worry about than problems of where anybody should be seated at a dinner table. The great mystery to me is how anybody can think of giving fetes that formal, in a time like this. I'm not one who believes all parties should be shelved for the duration; far from it. But there are parties and parties; and in time of war my vote goes only for those that are informal from first to last . . . unless, of course, there's a foreign dignitary to be feted—which is another matter entirely . . .

Miss Nash Gives Party for Trio

Honoring a trio of visitors from out of town, Miss Carolyn Nash entertained a few close friends at tea yesterday.

In one third of the spotlight at the small informal fete were Mrs. Sayre Macneil, who has been visiting Mrs. Randolph Huntington Minor. Mrs. Macneil plans to return to her home in California tomorrow. Also in roles of honored guests were Miss Marguerite Caperton, daughter of the late Admiral Caperton of Newport and Miss Carolyn Trippe of Palm Beach and New York, who are the guests at Clarence Hewes.

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Price Wetherill of Haverford, Pa., are receiving congratulations on the birth of a son, Samuel Price, jr., on Saturday, May 9., Mrs. Wetherill, formerly of Washington, was Mrs. Alice Constable Jewett, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Pepper Constable of Baltimore.

Miss Stockett Will Marry Lieut. West

Mr. and Mrs. Monroe H. Stockett of Arlington, Va., announce the engagement of their daughter, Marjorie, to Lieut. Ross West of Haddonfield, N. J.

Miss Stockett was graduated from Pennsylvania State College, where she was a member of Kappa Alpha Theta Fraternity.

Plans for Garden Tour Complete

Miss Katharine Dougal, who will be in charge of ticket arrangements at the various gardens listed for the annual Georgetown Garden Pilgrimage next Friday and Saturday, will have hostesses at each to receive visitors and show them about.

Mrs. Hollerith and her two daughters will be hostesses in their old-fashioned garden at 1633 Twenty-ninth Street, and Mrs. William B. Poland will have Mrs. Frank West assisting her in her garden, 1675 Thirty-first Street. Mrs. Henry Butler and a group of her friends will show visitors the charming Butler garden at 1671 Thirty-first Street, just two doors down from Mrs. Poland's; Mrs. John Ihlder will assist Mrs. Howard C. Davidson in her garden, 3238 R Street, one of the most beautiful of the larger gardens listed for the first day of the tour.

Lieut. Griffith Guest of Honor At Supper Party

Complimenting her brother, Lieut. Perry Griffith, U. S. A., and Mrs. Griffith, Mrs. Morrison M. Clark and Mr. Clark entertained last night at a supper party in the garden of their home in Chevy Chase.

About 14 young people, including several students from the University of Maryland were invited to the 7 o'clock supper which was a farewell event for Lieutenant Griffith who leaves tomorrow for Army duty in Louisiana. Postmaster and Mrs. Howard Griffith gave a dinner Tuesday night in honor of their son, who has also been entertained this week by Maj. and Mrs. Charles H. Dayoff, Mr. and Mrs. John Livingston and Mr. and Mrs. Granville Klink.

Guests Arriving for Wedding Saturday

Beating the gasoline rationing—they hope—guests will begin arriving today for the wedding of Miss Diana Jane Barton and Ensign Armistead Jones Maupin Saturday at St. Paul's Episcopal Church.

Ensign Maupin's mother and sister, Mrs. Alfred Maupin and Miss Nancy Maupin, will come in from Raleigh today and will be the house guests of Miss Lillie M. Jones during their stay. Also coming from Raleigh will be Mr. and Mrs. William B. Jones, uncle and aunt of the prospective bridegroom; Mrs. Harry Fain and her sons, William A. White and Harry Fain, jr.

Hardly to be included among the "guests," but arriving today, also, will be Ensign Maupin himself, who is expected to come in by train from Chicago. As he has but 10 days' leave in all, Miss Barton has asked that several parties which had been planned for her this week be postponed until after the wedding trip, when she will return to Washington and live with her mother while Ensign Maupin is on active duty.

Tomorrow night Miss Barton and her mother will entertain at a family dinner for the out-of-town guests and wedding party before the wedding rehearsal.

Miss Carolyn Trippe Is Luncheon Hostess

Miss Carolyn Trippe of New York, who with Miss Marguerite Caperton of Newport, has been the guest of Clarence Hewes for the last two days, entertained at luncheon yesterday at the Mayflower Hotel.

Last evening, Mr. Hewes took his guests to the Ballet Russe last night. Miss Trippe and Miss Caperton will leave Washington today for New York.

Machinery Urged to Rule on Alien Loyalty

Thousands Face Removal, House Told

The National Defense Migration Committee told the House yesterday "hundreds of thousands" of persons might be moved from the East Coast under executive order, unless machinery could be created for establishing their loyalty and enabling them to resume normal civilian life.

Such large-scale evacuations would result, the committee reported, if the executive order under which Japanese were removed from West Coast defense areas should be applied to the East Coast.

The committee, headed by Representative Tolan (Democrat), California, said it believed the time had come for President Roosevelt to "consider the need of drafting a new executive order delineating the present necessities of our situation."

"Difficult Problem"

"It may be expected that unless immediate steps are taken by the President to review his executive order of February 19 authorizing the Secretary of War to prescribe military areas, the difficult problems confronting the Italian and German aliens on the West Coast will be many times multiplied by recent developments in the East," the committee said. "Hundreds of thousands of persons will be moved as a group unless adequate machinery is speedily created for establishing their reliability and enabling them to resume normal civilian life.

"The evacuation problem assumed Nation-wide proportion when Lieut. Gen. Hugh A. Drum, commanding the First Army, announced on April 17 that 16 States along the Atlantic Seaboard were designated as a military area under authority conferred on him by the Secretary of War."

The committee said it believed the action of the Army in removing Japanese aliens and citizens from the West Coast was final but said it had "become clear that a curtailment of the rights and privileges of the American-born Japanese citizens of this country will furnish one of the gravest tests of democratic institutions in our history."

The committee said its previous suggestion that hearing boards be set up to eliminate the wholesale evacuation of German and Italian aliens had not been followed but it believed it imperative that this be done. It said General Drum's order suggested the application of the evacuation orders to citizens as well as aliens.

"The committee is concerned lest this authority to employ either wholesale evacuation of selective processes may far outrun what we believe to have been the original intentions of the President in promulgating his executive order," the report said.

Hearing Boards Urged

The committee advocated immediate establishment of hearing boards to pass upon and certify loyalty of German and Italian aliens, protect real and personal property of the evacuees, and supervise their proper resettlement and preservation of their personal articles and household effects.

It recommended creation of a council to supervise the various phases of the Japanese evacuation and reexamine present policies. The council would consists of representatives of the War Time Civil Control Administration, Western Defense Command, Director of the War Relocation Authority, the Farm Security Administration and the Federal Reserve Bank.

Coffee-Throwing Prof Who Defended Roosevelt Is Fired

Santa Rosa, Calif., May 13 (AP).—A professor who broke the solemnity of a faculty lunchroom by throwing a cup of coffee at another instructor in an argument over President Roosevelt found himself virtually out of a job today, but ready to go into court to obtain reinstatement.

He was Howard T. Wheeler, 47-year-old language professor at Santa Rosa Junior College, whose scuffle with Otto Carl Ross, 33, an engineering instructor, was described last night before the college board of trustees. The trustees then voted not to renew Wheeler's contract.

"I'm going to sue, probably for defamation of character, if the board fires me," Wheeler told reporters.

Wheeler said he threw a cup of coffee at Ross and then came to blows with him last Friday when the engineering professor referred to President Roosevelt as a Communist. Ross denied he had ever called the President a Communist and said he merely was criticizing the Administration's farm policy.

Committee Named to Plan Community War Fund Here

Further steps toward the consolidation of fund raising activities of all war and other relief agencies were taken last night when a general committee was appointed by Commissioner John Russel Young for the establishment of a community war fund for Washington.

Such a committee was recommended at a mass meeting held last Friday to consider the type of campaign adopted in other cities throughout the country. In naming the committee, Young emphasized the efficiency of this coordinated action.

"It is important," he said, "that all possible steps be taken to conserve energy, manpower and leadership in philanthropic drives as in every other phase of present-day activity."

He was emphatic that this consolidation would in no way mean the elimination of any of the present "worthwhile organizations which conduct drives for funds," but would more assure the success of any participating organization.

The members named on the committee are:

Dr. Frank Ballou, Frank Bane, Mrs. Harry S. Bernton, the Rev. Oscar F. Blackwelder, Col. Lemuel Bolles, Morris Cafritz, Wilbur J. Carr, Wayne Chatfield-Taylor, Mrs. Raymond Clapper, James E. Drought Threatens TVA Output

A new drought threatens power production at the great TVA hydro-electric generators in the Tennessee Valley center of aluminum and other war production, the Geological Survey reported yesterday.

The drought area extends from the Virginia seaboard to central Tennessee, with April having been the driest month of record since 1879 in eastern Tennessee, the Survey said. It added that there was yet no sign of improvement.

Drought last year caused curtailment of civilian and commercial uses of electricity over a wide area in the Southeast, but the new dry area is more localized. There is yet no power shortage in the Tennessee Valley because of the large water storage behind TVA dams.

The Survey said "long continued above-normal rains are needed in the Eastern drought area to avert a repetition of last year's adverse conditions in that industrial and agricultural area."

Half of Eleanor-Elinor Team, Mrs. Morgenthau, Back at Work

By Ann Cottrell
Washington Bureau of Chicago Sun

Half of the Eleanor-Elinor team has gone back to work for the Government.

Elinor Morgenthau, friend and former Office of Civilian Defense associate of Eleanor Roosevelt, is now working for her husband, the Secretary of the Treasury, it was learned yesterday. She is giving her time to planning the war bond campaign.

After the debacle in OCD, where she worked desk by desk with the former assistant director, Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, Mrs. Morgenthu did not remain long idle. Part-time Red Cross club work apparently was not enough, after acquiring a taste for desk jobs in the Government.

Thus, while Mrs. Roosevelt no longer works from 9 to 5 as a Government official, her "stand in," as Mrs. Morgenthau has been called, spends the better part of her week conferring with Treasury officials on ways and means to put the war bond drive across. Her service is without compensation.

So far, however, the example of this newest venture has failed to lure the President's wife back into a Federal position, even though it was Mrs. Roosevelt who first introduced Mrs. Morgenthau to the field of public affairs.

The Eleanor-Elinor team started back in the 1920's when the two worked in the women's division of the new Democratic Committee. During all the presidential campaigns since 1932, Mrs. Morgenthau has contributed her time to helping President Roosevelt get elected.

Before becoming deputy assistant director of the now abandoned volunteer participation section of OCD, headed by Mrs. Roosevelt, Mrs. Morgenthau served as adviser to the fine arts section of the Public Works Administration, and as an adviser to the National Youth Administration.

Her present post with the Treasury Department is so little known that no critic has pointed to it as a "family affair."

She is the first of the Cabinet wives to go to work on an office basis for her husband. Others, however, are helping their husbands in various ways.

For example, Mrs. Harold Ickes skimps on gasoline as much as any Mrs. John Doe anywhere. When she comes into Washington from the Ickes Maryland farm once a week, she comes early with the Secretary and waits in town until he is finished for the day.

Raids on Anti-Soviet Group Spreading Across Country

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

New York, May 13.—Agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, acting under search warrants, have raided New York headquarters of the Russian National Revolutionary Fascist Party, headed by Anastase Andreivitch Vonsiatsky of Thompson, Conn., it was learned today.

The raids appeared to be the first step in a Nation-wide effort of the FBI to break up the organization, which for the first time in one of the warrants on file was accused of conspiring with Germany and Japan to overthrow the present Soviet regime.

A warrant issued by Judge Hulbert in United States District Court empowered FBI to search the rooms of the Rev. Alexander Tzuglevitch in the apartment of Mrs. H. Koroleff. Another warrant, on file in United States District Court in Brooklyn, permitted agents to search and seize records in the home of T. Savin, South Ozone Park, Queens, also described as one of the party's New York headquarters.

The warrant issued by Judge Hulbert also listed five addresses in Los Angeles, two in San Francisco and one in Hollywood as additional "branch headquarters" of the Fascist organization. Officials of the FBI here tonight said it was probable local bureau offices in those three cities had already conducted or would conduct similar raids.

The 14-room colonial home of Vonsiatsky in Thompson was raided by agents on May 9. Tomorrow in Hartford, a Federal grand jury will begin examination of the records the FBI seized.

At the tie of the Connecticut raid, Vonsiatsky was described by the FBI as a self-styled White hussian leader in this country.

Dentist Is First D. C. Blackout Victim

Dr. Allen E. Cowles, 73, retired dentist, of 7302 Hilton Avenue, Takoma Park Md., became the first blackout victim in the metropolitan area Tuesday night when he was struck by a car while walking home during the alarm.

COWLES

Dr. Cowles, with his wife, had gone to the J. Enos Ray School to obtain a gasoline ration card. They left the school at about 11 p. m., a few minutes after the alarm sounded.

While the couple was crossing a street Dr. Cowles was struck by a car driven by James R. Athos, 21, of 118 Lancaster Road, Takoma Park, an auxiliary fireman reporting for blackout duty. Mrs. Cowles, who was several paces ahead, was uninjured. Taken to the Washington Sanitarium by the Takoma Park Rescue Squad, he died a short time later.

Police are holding Athos on a charge of manslaughter pending a preliminary hearing. He said he was driving at 15 miles an hour with cowl lights.

Dr. Cowles, a well-known resident of Takoma Park, was valedictorian of the first dental class at Georgetown University in 1902. Born in Whitewater, Wis., he came to Washington in 1898 where he worked at the Government Printing Office while attending Georgetown. He had practiced here until he retired two years ago.

Active in the Scottish Rite, he was a 32d degree Mason, a member of the East Gate Lodge of Masons and was past patron of the Cathedral Chapter of the Order of the Eastern Star. He was treasurer of the Board of Directors of the Masonic and Eastern Star Home for 25 years and was one of the founders and a regional director of the Northeast Building and Loan Association.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Jesse W. Cowles, a daughter, Mrs. Lois A. Tabler, wife of Robert Tabler, all of whom live at the Hilton Street home; and a son, Corpl. Claude Cowles, who is with the Army Air Corps at Eglin Field, Fla.

Funeral services are to be held at the Sherwood Presbyterian Church, at Twenty-second Street and Rhode Island Avenue Northwest, tomorrow at 3 p. m., with interment at Fort Lincoln Cemetery. Services will be conducted by the Rev. Richard A. Mussen. Mrs. Minnie E. Keyes, right worthy grand secretary of the O. E. S. and a lifelong friend of Dr. Cowles, will give a personal tribute at the services.

Aunt of Murder Victim Points Out Model at Trial

By the Associated Press

New York, May 13.—Slim, pale Madeline Webb, 28-year-old model, was dramatically pointed out today by the elderly aunt of Mrs. Susan Flora Reich as the person who had invited Mrs. Reich by telephone to visit her at the Hotel Sutton to meet "my new husband" a few days before Mrs. Reich was found slain.

The Oklahoma-born girl, on trial with Eli Shonbrun, her alleged lover, and John D. Cullen, under charges of first degree murder, seemed about to rise from her chair when Mrs. Reich's aunt, Miss Eliza Evalina Klarmann, stood in front of her and said:

"This is the lady here."

Miss Webb fidgeted in her chair, slumped back, and drank from a glass of water. A court attendant, who had assisted Miss Klarmann from the witness stand to give her a close view of Miss Webb after she had said apologetically "I don't see very far," aided the elderly woman back to the stand.

Jacques Buitengant, chief defense counsel, protested throughout the procedure and moved for a mistrial, Judge Jonah J. Goldstein denied the motion.

Assistant District Attorney Jacob A. Grumet, who had demanded the death penalty for all three defendants earlier, brought out that Miss Klarmann and Miss Webb had met in his office March 11, six days after Mrs. Reich's trussed and strangled body had been found in a Hotel Sutton suite.

Under questioning, Miss Klarmann said she had recognized Miss Webb's voice then as the voice of a person who had called on "Sunday or Monday" before the murder and asked Mrs. Reich "to make the acquaintance of my new husband."

Miss Klarmann testified that the caller said: "This is Madeline Webb . . . you don't know me," and after she had assured the person that Mrs. Reich had spoken of Miss Webb highly, the caller replied, "Yes, I love Susie (Mrs. Reich) very much . . . I want her to meet my husband. I was married several weeks ago."

A book in which Miss Klarmann said she noted down the address of the Hotel Sutton and the hotel's telephone number was introduced by Grumet as evidence for the prosecution. The prosecution has contended that Miss Webb and Shonbrun had registered at the hotel as "Mr. and Mrs. Ted Leopold."

In his opening statement, Grumet characterized the dark-haired model and her two codefendants as "cold-blooded robbers and murderers," and demanded conviction of "this motley group." He said robbery was the motive for the strangulation of Mrs. Reich, Polish refugee wife of a wealthy New Jersey manufacturer.

On Bond in Assault, Man Is Held Again On Similar Charge

At liberty under bond on one assault charge, John Leon Williams, Negro, 37, who was freed of a murder charge in February, was back in police custody last night charged with assault with a dangerous weapon.

He was arrested at his home, 1531 A Street Southeast, after Pvt. Henry H. Strong, 33, Negro, attached to Fort Belvoir, was slashed across the face with a knife in the 1000 block Eleventh Street Northwest.

Detective Lieut. Jeremiah Flaherty and Sergt. C. C. Carver arrested the suspect. It was Flaherty who arested Williams in November 1940 in connection with the fatal stabbing of Clyde Kirkland, Negro. This latter case was nolle prossed in February.

Williams also was arraigned in Police Court May 2 and demanded a jury trial on a charge of assaulting a Negro woman. His record shows that he served 6 months in jail here in 1939 for assault and prison terms for burglary in Florida and larceny in New York City.

After leaving the teaching profession, Colonel Woods worked for awhile as a reporter on the New York Evening Sun and later engaged in the lumber business in Mexico and the cotton converting business in Boston. He was deputy police commissioner for New York City from 1907 to 1909.

During World War I, he served overseas, advancing to the rank of colonel and assistant director of military aeronautics. He was holder of the Distinguished Service Medal and was a Chevalier of the French Legion of Honor.

In 1919, after being honorably discharged from the service, Colonel Woods was named assistant to the Secretary of War in charge of efforts to reestablish service men in civil life.

Col. Ahern, Spanish War Hero, Dies

Lieut. Col. George Patrick Ahern, 83, retired Army officer and hero of the Spanish-American War, died here yesterday.

As a second lieutenant in 1883, he was appointed as secretary to Sitting Bull after the Custer massacre, when the famed Sioux chief was interned at Fort Randall, then Dakota Territory. Because the Indian knew no language except that of the Sioux, the young officer was assigned to deal with autograph hunters and fan mail.

A native of New York, Colonel Ahern was graduated from West Point and received his commission in the Infantry in 1882. He was awarded the Silver Star and cited for "gallantry in action at Tayabacoa, Cuba, June 30, 1898."

He was the author of "Why the American Army Succeeded," "Deforested America," "Forest Bankruptcy in America" and "The Philippine government.

During World War I, Colonel Ahern was secretary of the Army War College here. He was resident here since 1915.

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Jean Gill Ahern of 2227 Twentieth Street Northwest, and a brother, Joseph E. Ahern of Washington.

Funeral services will be held at the Fort Myer chapel at 3 p. m. tomorrow. Burial will be at Arlington National Cemetery.

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

First Lady Concerned Over Pay Check Delays

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt again has gone to bat for the new Federal employe. The First Lady, it was learned yesterday, is inquiring into the reasons for the long delay in paying new employes their first checks. She has asked top Federal officials for an explanation and it is high time someone did it. New employes, particularly in the new war agencies, often work four, five and six weeks before they are given a pay check. Mrs. Roosevelt is understood to have said in her letters that she had been told of cases where new workers had no money to buy food and had gone hungry because of the long and inexcusable delay in paying the employes.

The First Lady also pointed out in her letter that many new employes had been forced to borrow money, some of it from loan sharks, because the Government had failed to pay them on time. New war agencies, generally speaking, are the ones at fault, War Production Board, Office of Price Administration and the Office of Emergency Management in particular. There is a decided tendency in war agencies to blame the delay on the Treasury Department, the Civil Service Commission, or both. However, the facts show that the blame lies right in the agencies themselves. Treasury's division of disbursements gives preference to payrolls and if can write the checks in a matter of hours once it gets a certified payroll from the agency. Civil Service cannot hold up a payroll. It might, however, hold up the check of an individual if that individual had not been properly hired.

More ammunition for Mrs. Roosevelt: Administrative pay rises under the Ramspeck-Mead automatic promotion act that were due on October 1, 1941, still have not been paid to all the eligible employes in the new war agencies. Employes who were supposed to get promotions under the same act on January 1 and April 1 haven't received a penny to date. Traveling expenses have not been paid to employes for trips made weeks and months ago. Employes who were given grade promotions weeks and months ago are still being paid at the old scales. Sure, they will get the money, but when? For the sake of employe morale the payments should be made within a reasonable time.

Good luck to you, Mrs. Roosevelt, in cleaning up the mess.

Gilbert L. Rodier, Washington architect who has been chief of Federal Public Housing project division, has been placed in charge of the subregional office to be set up here. The office will build homes for war workers here. Charles K. Agle succeeds him as project division chief . . . Marshall Dimock, associate commissioner of Immigration and Naturalization, has resigned to become director of recruiting and manning of the War Shipping Administration. His job will be to recruit officers and seamen for our new merchant ships . . . Farm Credit which moves to Kansas City over the weekend, will leave only a six-man liaison staff here, headed by Deputy Governor Warburton. Other members are H. L. Spratt, L. S. Hulbert, Walter Bauer, T. F. Murphy and Glen A. Wilbur.

Twenty thousand people, Federal employes and their families, already have been moved out of Washington through the decentralization program. The number of actual employes is more than 7000 and many more are scheduled to go. Public Buildings Decentralization Unit has leased more than 2,500,000 square feet of office space in a dozen cities to place the Federal bureaus. The space was leased at an average cost of $1.25 a foot. It was originally estimated the cost would be $1.50 but the lower figure will save the Government three millions annually. Fred E. Taylor, chief of the unit, negotiated the lease for more than half a million feet in Chicago's Merchandise Mart which was the largest lease in history.

Washington boarding house operators are unwittingly dynamiting the drive for higher salaries for low-paid Federal workers. They are calling up members of Congress to demand that the bill pass so they can raise their rates. The operators claim they are losing money under the rent freeze . . . Very few decentralized employes have returned here—nine from New York and 25 from Philadelphia . . . Agriculture is limiting its employes to 14 days leave at any one time.

Well Worth Considering

Norfolk, Va., May 13 (A.P.).—A thirsty stenographer at the Norfolk Naval Base walked over to a drinking fountain, pulled a gadget—and up to the administration building rushed several bright red fire engines. Naval officers are now considering the advisability of painting the fire alarm handle one color and the fountain handle another.

Kutz Urges Spread Out Raid Control

Decentralization Of Communications To Avoid Jam Is Recommended

Decentralization of Washington's civilian defense communications system was recommended to the District Board of Commissioners yesterday by Brig. Gen. C. W. Kutz, following his observations at the control center during the Tuesday night blackout.

General Kutz, the Engineer Commissioner, thus may become the "deciding factor" in an argument that has kept defense officials in disagreement for several months and that may now be placing in jeopardy the lives of Washingtonians—all admittedly in the "target area" for enemy bombers.

Jam Feared in Case of Raid

To break the deadlock between the communications factions, Defense Coordinator John Russell Young more than a month ago asked National OCD Director James M. Landis for an opinion. Landis emphatically recommended decentralization. He reiterated this recommendation Tuesday night, when he again spent the blackout period at the center.

Should the city have an air raid, Director Landis declared, one control center for communications could not possibly handle the calls. Ambulances not only would fail to be dispatched to the scene of bomb hits, but the board would be so jammed with calls that the hits might not even be reported.

He argued that calls for no more than 100,000 persons can be handled at one center and that therefore at least five or six subcenters should be set up for Washington. It is not a question of machinery breaking down, he declared, but of the human equation.

Subcontrols in Police Stations

To pretend that one dispatcher can sit at the board sending out equipment to all the calls that would come in for the warden services during a bombing, he and others contend, is just as far-fetched as it would be to assume that one general could direct specifically all the troop and supply movements of a large campaign.

"City after city has started out with the central control and learned it would not work. New York and Washington are the holders-on to the old method," he declared.

General Kutz suggested that possibly subcontrol centers could be set up in the 13 police stations of the city. He specified that he felt any changes made in dispatch of fire-fighting apparatus should keep control directly in the hands of the chief of the Fire Department.

Landis praised the work of Fire Chief Stephen T. Porter for the handling of Fire Department calls Tuesday night. He insisted, however, that decentralization was needed even for this part of the civilian defense work, and that the demands were in excess of the dispatching ability of one person.

Herbert Friede, chief of the communications service, has insisted one board is best for the city. Although he was out of town yesterday, a spokesman for him declared the Tuesday night showing was very good indeed. The policy committee of the local defense setup, of which Friede is a member, has made its recommendations on decentralization to Coordinator Young, who is ill. Lieut. Col. C. Beverly Snow, chairman of the committee, yesterday said he could not divulge the recommendations, but it was assumed they are in favor of retaining the one-control center.

Officials arguing in favor of decentralization of all the services possible, keeping the large board for big city-wide needs, have pointed out that the lighest bomber carries 750 incendiary bombs. Scoring a hit of 10 per cent, which they say is a good average, and assuming that eacn hit resulted in three calls for service—and this is considered the minimum—one bomber thus could jam the control center. This assumption is based on the rate at which Landis said calls were being completed Tuesday night, when, he declared, less than 100 calls were completed in 30 minutes.

A 4-year-old boy was fatally injured yesterday under the wheels of a milk truck in the 2400 block N Street Northwest. He was the District's forty-fourth traffic victim this year.

Robert Lee Warren, Negro, 4, of 2414 N Street Northwest, died at Emergency Hospital shortly after noon of a fractured skull and other injuries. He ran into the truck operated by Lloyd D. Martin, 42, of 923 L Street Northwest, police said.

Martin said he was traveling east on N Street Northwest, beginning deliveries. The boy was on the north side of the street with his mother, Mrs. Mary Warren, who was making a purchase from a push-cart vendor. The child left his mother's side and ran into the street, apparently without seeing the approaching truck.

The driver will appear at a coroner's inquest at a later date.

Cathedral Chorus Sings Verdi's Mass

By Ray C. B. Brown

Cathedral Choral Society presents Giuseppe Verdi's "Requiem Mass" on Wednesday night in memoriam of the Very Rev. ZeBarney Thorne Phillips, dean of Washington Cathedral. Conductor: Paul Callaway. Soloists: Agnes Davis, Pauline Pierce, William Hain and George Britton. Organist: E. William Brackett. Orchestra of 50 members of the National Symphony Orchestra.

Under the direction of Paul Callaway, the recently organized Cathedral Choral Society made its first public appearance last evening in a performance of Verdi's "Requiem Mass" before a large audience in Washington Cathedral Church of St. Peter and St. Paul. The occasion had been intended only as the introduction of a new chorus dedicated to the singing of great religious music in a great religious temple, but the unexpected death of the Very Rev. ZeBarney Thorne Phillips turned it into a memorial service for the lamented Dean of the Cathedral. No more fitting tribute could have been paid to a distinguished cleric whose love of music was symbolized by his chairmanship of the society's board of directors.

Brown

With the feeling of bereavement so immediate in the emotions of the listeners, the performance had a singular impressiveness quite apart from its excellencies as a whole and in detail. Assisted by 50 members of the National Symphony Orchestra and E. William Brackett at the console of the organ, the chorus of 150 voices proved itself a credit to the training of Paul Callaway. The principal solo parts were sung by Agnes Davis, Pauline Pierce, William Hain and George Britton, American artists deservedly esteemed.

After Beethoven had led the way in the writing of deeply personalized music, all great choral music of the nineteenth century became unmistakably subjective. The requiems of Brahms and Verdi, which have claims to be considered the greatest works of their kind, are typical examples of this trend. Both are expressions of individuality in emotional expression, both are intensely sincere, yet neither of them is a requiem in the strict sense of the word. Brahms did not use the liturgy of the mass, but prepared his text from verses of the Bible and called his work a German requiem. Verdi's requiem is not an ecclesiastical composition, but a use of the liturgy to voice his profound personal emotions.

Verdi's requiem has been criticized as theatrical, but that is a snap judgment made without careful consideration of his essential nature. The greater part of his life was given to writing for the theater, and the idiom of the stage was in his blood. It would be illogical to expect from his pen ecclesiastical music of a purely objective kind.

The requiem abounds in reminiscenses of "Aida," which Verdi had composed only two years before, but those resemblances in theme and harmony are applied to a different purpose with consummate art.

Ballet Presents Splendid Program

The celebrated Les Ballets Russes de Monte Carlo, presented by S. Hurok, last night offered "The Magic Swan," "The New Yorker," "The Afternoon of a Faun," and "Gaite Parisienne" to an appreciative audience at the National Theater.

"The Magic Swan," the third act of the full-length ballet, "Swan Lake," starring Alexandra Danilova, as the "Black Swan," and Igor Youskevitch, as the young prince, picked up the color of Tchaikowsky's music and, although less fantastic, fabricated an effective performance.

Alexandra Danilova was a bit tight in expression, but proved herself technically worthy. Igor Youskevitch moved with a freshness and vitality that was one of the brightest spots of the evening.

"The New Yorker," out of the limits of ballet, becomes almost a false note with the satire overworked, and the choreography was often unable to carry on. Frederick Franklin, as the "Gossip Columnist," relieves the strain of the dance with occasional open movements which awaken the composition and bring it together as a unit.

Egyptian in its regidness and simplicity, "The Afternoon Of a Faun," uses all the privileges of ballet to become artistry.

The ballet, although by far the shortest, was very well received, with no little share of the merit going to Igor Youskevitch, who, as the faun, did an accomplished job.

"Gaite Parisienne," the saucy and sparkling French sister of the Le Beau Danube, took advantage of all that choreography can offer from interesting floor patterns to exquisite aurias of dance. Mia Slavenska, as the entrancing glove-seller; Eleanora Marra, as the jealout flower girl, and George Zoritch, as the handsome Austrian baron, all danced with a freeness and enjoyment which constituted a refreshing concluding number. Victory Sidelights

Maj. Devereux's Son Unveils Poster for U.S.O. Drive in N. Y.

John Patrick Devereux, 8-year-old son of Maj. James P. S. Devereux who commanded the marines in the heroic stand at Wake Island in December, yesterday unveiled in New York's Times Square the first of several thousand posters to be used in the United Service Organization's 32-million-dollar fund-raising campaign.

The poster, painted by Artist Howard Scott, depicted a grinning soldier and bore the slogan: "You help someone you know when you give to USO."

Maj. Devereux, marine hero who headed 385 men stationed on Wake Island during the 14-day attack by the Japanese, was author of the famous request, "Send us some more Japs" when the Navy asked him what he needed.

With his mother, the boy lives at 1 West Bradley Lane in Chevy Chase, Md.

Retailers to Get Price Instruction

Retailers in the Washington metropolitan area will be given an opportunity tomorrow to learn more about the new maximum price regulations issued by the Office of Price Administration. The meeting will be held at 2:30 p. m. in the auditorium of the United States Chamber of Commerce, Connecticut Avenue and H Street Northwest.

Dr. Lloyd C. Reynolds, regional price executive of the Baltimore Regional Office, will explain the operations of the new regulations.

Red Cross Plans Summer Program

The District Chapter of the American Red Cross is planning its summer program in home nursing and is organizing classes in all parts of the District. Several classes are functioning at the present time in the Northeast area, the latest of which is being held in the Maryland Court Apartments, Ninth and Maryland Avenue Northeast, sponsored by Mrs. Buck, manager of the apartment house.

There are several vacancies in this class, making it possible for new entrants to be enrolled when the class has its next meeting today at 1 p. m. The class meets weekly on Tuesdays and Thursdays from 1 to 3 p. m. and the course will cover a minimum of 24 hours.

Kalorama Group Seeks Defense Funds

To raise an estimated $3000 for civilian defense expenses in the District, the Kalorama Civilian Defense Committee is conducting a funds-raising campaign.

The campaign will begin today and end May 25. The money raised will be used to pay for such things as the telephone and postage bills at the 13 zone warden posts and janitor's fees at two schools where first air courses are being conducted.

Checks should be made out to the Kalorama Civilian Defense Committee and mailed to the treasurer, Milton B. Zeller. Some of the prominent citizens who expect to be active in the campaign are the following members of the committee: Admirals Charles E. Courtney and David F. Sellars, both U. S. N. retired; Mr. Edward Hillyer, high official of the Union Trust Co., and Charles Delmar, official of the Southern Industrial Loan Corp.

Nursing School To Graduate 20

A class of 20 will be graduated from the School of Nursing of Georgetown University at commencement exercises today at 4:30 p. m. in Gaston Hall on the college campus.

Most of the young women will be entering Army and Navy services. United States Attorney Edward M. Curran will address the graduates.

Bus and Trolley Accidents Show Proportionate Decline

Despite a rising traffic toll, accidents involving streetcars and buses are on the decline, in proportion to passengers carried, E. D. Merrill, president of the Capital Transit Co., told The Post yesterday.

At the same time it was learned that a special citizens committee has completed its investigation of the death of 7-year-old Francis Hugh Immer under the wheels of a Capital Transit bus May 6. It will file a lengthy report, with recommendations, next week.

At the request of The Post, Merrill compiled an array of data which show:

That there were 5.08 passenger accidents per million passengers carried on buses during the first four months of this year, compared with 5.38 in the same period last year. The corresponding streetcar accident ratio fell from 7:10 to 5.34.

Number Increases

That there was a slight increase in the number of accidents, on the basis of mileage, for the same four-month period. In 1941 bus accidents numbered 13.51 per 100,000 miles, compared with 14.27 this year. The street car accident figure went from 29.85 to 30.17.

That street cars and buses have been involved in nine street fatalities so far this year, not counting the death of a Capital Transit Co. employe in the Navy Yard barn last month.

If the same fatality rate is maintained for the remainder of the year, the number of deaths will exceed that of the previous "high" year—1935—when there were 17. Even so, it was explained, the rates with respect to passengers carried or miles traveled—these are the significant safety yardsticks—need not necessarily be higher, since street cars and buses are hauling far more passengers than at any time in the Capital's history.

Rigid Training Maintained

He explained that training standards are being maintained despite the difficulty in obtaining and keeping operators. The training period consumes a minimum of 26 days and may last 31 days or even longer.

Personnel complications resulting from the war notwithstanding, the company has still given no consideration to the idea of "conductorettes," who were a common sight in many cities during the World War, said Merrill.

"Ten or twelve" recommendations bearing on protection of pedestrians at the Chevy Chase Circle bus terminal will be incorporated in a report to be submitted to the Chevy Chase Citizens Association next Wednesday night.

Authority for the statement is J. Howell Gordon, a member of the investigating committee named by the association following the death of the Immer child at the terminal. Frank Buckley is chairman of the committee.

All Drivers Exonerated

As was the case in the eight previous streetcar and bus fatalities this year, a coroner's jury exonertaed the driver of the bus that killed the boy, returning a verdict of accidental death.

Gordon said the report will urge erection of such safeguards as railings, white lines and signs and, subject to approval by the Chevy Chase Citizens Association at its meeting Wednesday, will be forwarded to the District Commissioners for appropriate action.

Firefighting Stirrup Pumps To Be Released to Public

The Office of Civilian Defense announced last night that priority clearance had been secured for stirrup pumps and that manufacturers will be permitted to turn out two million of them.

The pumps will be for sale to householders in the target area at a "price under $5," it was declared, and hope was expressed that the cost would not run to more than $3.50.

Distribution and price will be controlled by the OCD, to insure maximum benefit and no profiteering.

These pumps, much used by civilians fighting fires in England, are not part of the equipment of fire auxiliaries but are for individuals who wish this protection, it was pointed out. With them it is possible to pump water onto an incendiary bomb when the regular water pressure is off—provided householders have followed OCD intructions and have a barrel of water on hand.

The pump was developed by engineers of the War Production Board at request of the OCD. Priorities were long in coming because a limited amount of steel is used in the pump.

Hearings Continue on Stricter D. C. 8-Hour Law for Women

Public hearings on a proposed bill to improve enforcement of the eight-hour working day for women in the District were scheduled to continue at 10 a. m. today before a House District Subcommittee, after a number of witnesses had urged the bill's passage at hearings yesterday.

The measure would require all employers who hire women to post the time schedules of their workers, to help Minimum Wage Board inspectors in checking on the hours worked.

Mrs. William Kittle, chairman of the enforcement board who urged the bill's passage yesterday, explained that should an inspector find a woman working at hours other than those posted for her, this would constitute prima facie evidence of law violation in legal action against the employer.

She said that, at the present time, the board has great difficulty in obtaining evidence even where it knows violations exist. It has been necessary, she added, to post watchers to clock employes in and out, particularly since the workers themselves are hesitant to testify against employers for fear of jeopardizing their jobs.

She termed the amendment "nothing but a piece of machinery" which was "woefully needed" for proper enforcement of the hour law.

Representative Harris (Democrat) of Arkansas, and Representative Russel (Democrat) of Texas, indicated that they were opposed to the present form of the bill as impractical and unfair to both employer and employe.

Suggesting that a compulsory time clock system might better serve the purpose, Harris pointed out that if a worker came on the job an hour late and made up the hour after her usual quitting time, the employer might be charged with violating the law.

Others who testified in favor of the bill were Fred S. Walker, labor representative on the wage board; Mrs. Oscar Chapman, of the League of Women Voters; and Sidney Katz, of the C. I. O. Industrial Council.

Consent Decree and Block-Booking Up Again; Mr. Sherman Voices a Plea for 'Westerns;' Items of News and Gossip of the Theater

SO THAT OLD BUGABOO bobs up again!

I mean that the controversial issues raised by contemplated revisions of the Government "consent decree," governing the distribution of motion pictures—which expires June 1—have pumped new marrow into that perpetual bone of contention known to the trade as "block-booking."

DAVID O. SELZNICK

The block-booking practice which the present decree dismantled consisted of "blind selling" of a company's annual product to the exhibitor sight unseen. The decree limited selling to blocks of five feature pictures, which must be screened in advance for the exhibitors and then might be purchased in their discretion. The proposed revisions seek to increase the block units to 12 pictures, only five of which need be submitted to the exhibitors in preview, the remaining seven to be accepted on faith in stars, authorship and company representations.

The new modifications are sought by the United Motion Picture Industry, the association of producing companies that accepted the decree as a tentative settlement of the Government's antitrust suit. It includes Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Warner Brothers, Twentieth Century-Fox, Paramount and RKO-Radio.

They are being bitterly opposed by the Society of Independent Motion Picture Producers, including such distinguished picture-makers as Charles Chaplin, Samuel Goldwyn, Walt Disney, David O. Selznick, Alexander Korda, Mary Pickford, Hunt Stromberg, Orson Welles and Walter Wanger.

One of the early drawbacks to the successful operation of the consent decree was the exhibitor's own indifference to the company previews and, if he did attend, his indecision as to which pictures of the features screened he wanted to buy. As time has gone on, it has functioned with constantly increasing efficiency. Like everything else, it has its disadvantages to both producers and exhibitors, along with its advantages.

At any rate, the battle is on to determine which of the two outweighs the other. It ought to be quite a fight. It always has been!

Honor Where Honor Is Due

Speaking of David O. Selznick and Hunt Stromberg, as we were somewhere back there, a handsomely embossed monograph comes along from United Artists expressing the company's pride that both are included among its top-flight producers. It tells you why. Mr. Selznick, it seems, recently rounded out a record 10 years as No. 1 Producer in "Fame's" compilation of outstanding boxoffice product. During the past decade, both he and Mr. Stromberg have run up a score of 26 pictures each which qualified as Box-Office Champions on the basis of bona fide audits of national returns at the ticket wickets. This figure has never been equaled by any other producer in the industry, says Gradwell L. Sears, U. A. vice president in charge of distribution.

Then there is the letter from Producer Harry Sherman, who has a vital interest in such things, decrying the eagerness of press and public to brand all "western" pictures as "horse operas." He points out that the "westerns" are now and always have been the bread-and-butter pictures and high-profit films of the industry, and would like to know if such depictions of early American life as "The Covered Wagon," "Billy the Kid," "Jesse James," "Stagecoach," "They Died With Their Boots On," "Union Pacific," "The Plainsman," and dozens of others like them, deserve to be stigmatized as "horse operas." And another thing. William Farnum, Tom Mix and William S. Hart, the highest paid actors the industry has ever known, all three were "western" stars. We are completely on Mr. Sherman's side for the same reason that we feel motion pictures have outgrown the derogatory diminutive of "movies."

Signal Corps to Have Its Turn

Hollywood, May 13 (INS).—John Gunther, famed author of the "inside" books—inside Asia, Europe and South America—and a foreign correspondent as gifted as Richard Harding Davis was in his most colorful days, is writing a story of the Signal Corps for Col. Darryl Zanuck. Interesting how the history of the branch of the service that deals with communications came to be made into a movie.

BOB HOPE

Here's the story: Colonel Zanuck was dining with Andy Lawlor, Hollywood agent, and discussing the fact that many of our Hollywood men, producers, directors, photographers, technicians and other studio folk are in the Signal Corps. Andy outlined what he thought would be an effective movie dealing with the Signal Corps and the colonel thought the idea so good he promptly engaged Gunther to travel around to the camps and write the scenario.

Somebody should do something drastic about Bob Hope before he knocks himself out. Frankly, Paramount is worried about his health and the fact that he never rests. Wonderful to have the spirit Bob has and want to do everything and be everywhere to raise funds and cheer our boys in camps and hospitals. But there is a limit to even his endurance. Bob's brand of laughter has put hundreds of thousands in Uncle Sam's Treasury and it would be too bad if he had to stop his good work. He should take a rest before he is forced to.

I hear through the grapevine that M-G-M is preparing a pro-Russian picture, the first of its kind, so far as I know, to come out of Hollywood. The title is "Guerrilla War" and it depicts the heroic deeds of the men and women of Russia who fight behind the lines and whose unorthodox warfare has helped give the whole world courage to know that the Axis have met their match.

The guerrilla fighters have in many ways been as effective as the regular Russian armies and their bravery and epic courage is one of the inspiring sidelights of the present world holocaust.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Ellen Drew is out of the hospital and resting at home to get her strength back so she can make a trip to Washington with Cy Bartlett; Van Heflin and Frances Neal have chosen Santa Barbara for their marriage next Friday; Bette Davis has put up her Glendale home for sale since her husband, Arthur Farnsworth, will be in the East for the duration.

Sheila Ryan and John Payne as happy as can be in a corner at Slapsy Maxie's; Big Boy Williams at Charley Foy's with Jerry Jordan, the singer. Remember when he was engaged to Lupe Velez? Judy Canova will head for the Middle West on a bond-selling tour as soon as she completes "Lazy Bones;" the glamour boys will have to grow their own beards and whiskers in future movies 'cause there "ain't no more" crepe hair to be had.

They Like 'Em Tough!

Hollywood, Calif., May 13. There's much speculation going on as to the femme audience's reaction to George Sanders in "Moon and Sixpence." Although Maugham made a mint of money from the book, which takes the female sex for a ride, it's to be seen how the gals will like book's hero in the flesh. George (in the character of Strickland—alias Gauguin) plays one of the most reprehensible males. He's selfish, capricious, domineering, lustful and totally self-centered; and the way he kicks his women around is a scandal. But Director Albert Lewin is staking his reputation on the theory that down in their secret hearts, the ladies still fall for a tough guy!

He first played for the Duke of Windsor (then the Prince of Wales) at Le Touquet, France. When Mrs. Robert Sweeney gave the prince a party at her home, Lud was playing at the Royal Picardy, and two cars came to the cafe to bring the boys to her house. One was driven by the prince. A musician sitting in the back seat, not knowing who the driver was, said, "I hope this guy won't keep us here all night."

Seems the prince had a passion for "It Had to Be You," which gets pretty monotonous after three or four hours. The prince brought Lud and his band to this country in 1928 to play for six of his private parties.

Broadway Bulletins

New York, May 13.

In the early '20's George K. Arthur and Karl Dane were co-starred in a movie which was one of the most successful of that period. It was "Rookies," a picture about Army life. Arthur had been attached to the Twenty-seventh Division during the last war and was the youngest sergeant in his brigade . . . When his film career was terminated Arthur became the publisher of a New York Magazine, GO. He made it a successful magazine, but this week he closed it and returned the advertising contracts to his clients. For on Friday he became an American citizen and the following day the star of "Rookies" enlisted as a private at Camp Upton.

One of the numbers in the "Music at Work" show, which was presented at the Alvin Theater last Sunday, was "Dance for Three." The setting was by Pavel Tchelitchew, the surrealist painter, whose one-man show is being exhibited at the Julien Levy Galleries . . . At the rehearsal of this number Marc Blitzstein phoned Tchelitchew, and told him: "I want to rehearse them all in costume. I'd like the settings ready on satge, the people in costume, and make it a real dress rehearsal" . . . "What you want from me is too simple," protested the surrealist artist. "I am a magician. I can do magical things. But this is merely a simple thing. And that I cannot do."

Sammy Renick, the jockey, is going to Hollywood with Roland Brown. They're writing a race track story for United Artists, with Roddy McDowell playing a jockey, Walter Brennan a tout and Renick the villain . . . Edgar Ansel Mowrer, the foreign correspondent, is writing a book on geopolitics and global warfare . . . Jackson & Perkins, the world's largest rose growers, have been swamped with orders for their "MacArthur Rose." They haven't had time to explain that the MacArthur Rose was created in 1915, and is named after Gen. Douglas MacArthur's father . . . The distribution of Bob Hope's autobiography has exceeded three million copies to date.

Jean Gabin and Marlene Dietrich returned to El Morocco on Saturday night—after a previous visit, during which they had been besieged by photographers. "It's no use taking our picture again," Gabin explained—revealing a new method of avoiding cameramen. "I'm wearing the same tuxedo, and Miss Dietrich, as you will notice, is still wearing the same gown" . . . Jack Dempsey's brother, Joe, now is helping him at his Broadway bar . . . There was either error or prophecy in the booklet containing reproductions of the Thomas Benton war series, "This Year of Peril," for which Archibald MacLeish wrote the foreword. Five hundred thousand copies of these paintings will be distributed, by plane, over France and China. In these pamphlets a piece of paper was pasted over MacLeish's description as Librarian of Congress "and chairman of Interdepartmental Committee on War Information."

Sam Goldwyn hired Alan Campbell and his wife, Dorothy Parker, without the knowledge of each other, to write separate scenes for the Lou Gehrig picture, "Pride of the Yankees." Alan did his work at the studio and Dorothy worked at home. Neither knew what the other's assignment was until they were half through . . . A lawyer, who wanted to be admitted to practice before the United States Supreme Court, asked Justice William O. Douglas about it. "I'd move your admission," Douglas confessed, "except that I've never been admitted to practice before the United States Supreme Court" . . . Lawrence Tibbett will sing for "I Am an American Day" here Sunday.

Via the air waves on Sunday, Capt. Tom Qualters, the President's former bodyguard, will reveal the story of the President's having browsed through some old files and discovering an ancient photograph. It was a picture of a baseball team. One of the players was Jim Farley, who at that time gave no indication of the baldness that was to befall him . . . The President studied the picture and sent it to Farley, with the inscription: "Dear Jim. In memory of your hair."

Charles Laughton appeared on a Norman Corwin radio program. Laughton studied the script at his hotel, was satisfied with his recital of the lines and went to the studio. There, however, he was unable to interpret the lines to his satisfaction. "When I sat in my easy chair at the hotel," Laughton told Corwin, "I was able to read the lines properly, but now I can't" . . . "There's only one thing to do then," Corwin suggested. He did it. He sent a messenger to the Algonquin, brought the easy chair from Laughton's room—and, seated in that chair before the microphone, Charles Laughton read his lines properly.

A bunch of the boys and girls on the set of "The Major and the Minor" were sitting around between scenes asking Ginger Rogers questions about the ranch she has near Medford, Oreg. She is making a dairy ranch of the 1080 acres.

Someone asked Ginger how much a cow cost—that is, a registered, blue-ribboned Guernsey milch cow, such as she owns. Her estimate indicated that the cost of a good cow is nothing to treat lightly.

Ray Milland, her co-star, remarked: "For the price of a good cow you can get a small new auto."

Man 'Scared of Nuthin'' Is Now Slightly Frightened by Spouse

By Frederick C. Othman

United Press Hollywood Correspondent

Hollywood, May 13.—Some movie producers put out a call a few months back for a young man who wanted to be an actor and who wasn't scared of anything. Emphasis on the "anything."

Knocking on the door of Producer Trem Carr, at Monogram Studios, came James Donnaldson, lecturer on zoology at the University of Southern California and author of books on desert fauna. He wasn't scared of anything, Donnaldson said.

Next thing he knew he was in the Amazon River wrestling crocodiles. Then he was in the jungles of Brazil, tangling with boa constrictors. A vampire bat had a meal off him. A water buffalo went to work on him, et cetera.

"And et cetera," reported Donnaldson today, "I got exactly what was promised."

Donnaldson arrived in Belem, Brazil, last January 1, with Clyde Elliott, the bring-'em-back-alive expert; Charles Ford, the director, and two cameramen for the filming of an epic of the jungle called "Killers of the Amazon."

Messrs. Ford and Elliott photographed the proceedings in black and white and color, while Actor Donnaldson learned about the jungle. He never did learn much about acting. He was too busy trying to save his life.

Take the time he was wrestling with an anaconda, which is a snake about 15 feet long and about as big around as a furnace pipe. There was Director Ford and his two comeramen standing by, grinding away. And there was Donnaldson with the snake tightening its coils around his neck.

"My eyes bulged," he said. "My tongue stuck out. And I could hear that camera going. I was beginning to wonder why Ford didn't pull off the snake, when I passed out."

"It was Jim's fault," Ford explained. "He didn't yell for help."

"I couldn't yell," Donnaldson interjected.

"So we just waited till his face turned black," Ford concluded.

We had a look at the pictures of this combat and we can report that Actor Donnaldson was not happy.

The expedition next went to Marajo Island in the mouth of the Amazon, the largest inland island in the world, and home of the black cayman, or crocodile.

"There were hundreds of crocodiles there," said Ford. "Thousands, maybe."

"Yep," said Donnaldson, "and so he told me to jump in there with 'em. I jumped. It was a quite novel experience."

What Will Wife Say

The pictures of that are available, too. Novel, the man says. He nearly lost his nose in one engagement with a 15-foot crocodile. The scar is there. Donnaldson said it was a simple matter to subdue crocodiles, once you get the hang of it. All you've got to do is put a stick between their jaws and tie 'em up.

Unfortunately the crocodile isn't interested in the stick. He wants Donnaldson.

All this is of a minor nature. Only two things really worried Donnaldson in the jungle. One was that bat, which started chewing on him during his sleep. The other was his breakfast eggs.

"We never could tell," explained Elliott, "whether we were getting hens' eggs or crocodiles' eggs, not at least after they were scrambled."

The adventurers brought back with them 200,000 feet of film. Elliott and Ford are cutting it now. As for Donnaldson, the man who wasn't scared of anything, he's waiting with fear and trepidation until his wife sees this dispatch. Mrs. Donnaldson knew he was going to the jungle, but she didn't know he was going to tackle any crocodiles. He didn't tell her when he returned.

"I don't exactly know how she'll feel about it," the brave man said.

our own. It was a slow business.

Armored divisions cannot be trained without the special equipment of armored forces; nothing but a tank can teach a tank driver to drive, a tank gunner to shoot, a tank mechanic to keep tanks going. Badly needed as they were, new armored divisions had to wait until equipment could be turned over to them for training.

That is why the job that has been done at Camp Polk is so pregnant with hope for the future. In doing it, the armored force has proved itself an outfit of topflight soldiers; it has accomplished its mission with the means at hand.

The General Said "Yes"

Last January, General Gillem was asked by the chief of the armored force if he could train another armored division besides the Third, which then was in training here. He was told he could have no more equipment immediately, that he would have to make what he had do for both divisions.

He said yes.

At that time there were only four armored divisions in the Army. The First and Second had been in existence almost two years. The Third and Fourth had been activated in April, 1941, around cadres from the First and Second. Now four more were to be created, though sufficient equipment for all of them simply did not exist.

The new Seventh Armored Division came into being the other day when the operation was performed on the parade ground at Camp Polk. It came into being complete with its commanding general and staff, its 13,000 soldiers trained in their highly specialized jobs although, until that moment, it had not one piece of equipment, one rifle, one typewriter, one gallon of gas it could call its own.

The whole job, from first to last, cost the people of America less than $100,000, which probably makes the Seventh Armored the most cheaply bought new division in the Army.

From now on, the Seventh Armored Division, the lucky seventh, General Gillem calls it, will go ahead perfecting itself in tactics, getting the feel of itself, becoming a solidly knit fighting machine able to take care of itself anywhere. Already it has received much of its equipment; more is reaching it every day. The Seventh will be ready to fight months ahead of the time it could have gone into action had it waited for these things until they were off the production lines.

3700 Men Formed Nucleus

Besides the money cost, creating the Seventh has had another price, small enough considering what it has bought. The Third, already stripped of two cadres for new armored divisions, furnished a third for the Seventh, 3700 trained men as a nucleus for the new division. It replaced these, as it had the two previous cadres, with new men and set out to train them while it pooled its equipment and its skill to train the Seventh.

As a result, the Third Armored Division, just a year after its birth, has in its ranks less than 40 per cent of the men and officers who came here in April, 1941, to give it a start in life. Altogether 30,000 men have passed through the Third in the last year, many more than the total in the two full-fledged divisions which will go on training here side by side until they are ready for battle.

The Third has been retarded in certain phases of its training, a situation which is true of every organization in the Army which has progressed far enough to furnish cadres for new units. It was true of the National Guard divisions whose strength was doubled by adding raw recruits in the midst of their own training. It is inevitable when a peace-loving Nation sets out to build a powerful and effective Army from the small force it permits itself between wars.

Obviously the monumental job which has been done here in the last 13 weeks could not have been done by ordinary methods. That it has been done is evidence of the American genius for production and the imagination of the officers and men who brought it to that moment on the Camp Polk parade grounds when the Seventh Armored Division sprang full-fledged into being.

Third Moved Into Tents

Men for the new division began coming here in mid-February from reception centers. As do other branches of the Army, the Seventh had to take what it could get, and it separated them after they got here on the basis of their intelligence ratings and their civilian trades, so no new organization would get all the most promising and none would get all the least promising in each lot.

These men were assigned to units in the new division, to its two armored regiments, its armored infantry regiment, its three armored field artillery battalions, its reconnaissance battalion, its armored medical and supply battalions, its signal and maintenance units. Each of these, set up alongside its equivalent organization in the Third, earmarked its men for the special work they were to do.

There were not sufficient barracks for both divisions, so the Third moved into tents, turning its barracks over to the new men not yet hardened by a year in service. Both divisions, old and new, used the same messhalls, members of each division eating together in separate shifts. Offices for each unit of the new division were organized alongside equivalent offices of the old, working together on the same administrative matters.

Weapons of all the Third's companies and batteries were placed in a pool for use by both divisions and an exact schedule was worked out to get the fullest use from them. Under this schedule, each unit of the new Seventh trained for one week each with the pistol, the rifle, the submachine gun and the ground machine gun used by infantry.

Every man who could pass the vehicle driver's aptitude test was taught to drive the Army's six-wheel 2½-ton truck. For the first five weeks they followed the general replacement training program under guidance of the Third, using the Third's equipment on an equal basis with the old division.

Then in the sixth week they branched out into the specialist training which made them truck and half-track drivers, motorcycle riders, tank drivers, tank and half-track gunners, cannoneers for the self-propelled 105 and 75-millimeter howitzers. Men who were to become repairmen for the division's vehicles and weapons went to work in the shops of the Third's maintenance battalion. Those who were to be engineers began training with the heavy and highly complicated equipment of the Third's battalion of engineers.

Western Wins All Awards in Cadet Drill

Western High School cadets captured all three places in the annual cadet competition yesterday at Griffith Stadium, thereby becoming the first school to make a clean sweep of the drill since World War I.

The only time this feat has been duplicated in the 58-year history of the high school cadet organization was in 1918, when Central High School cadets won three places.

Presentation of awards climaxed the annual drill of the brigade of 2063 cadets reviewed by Army authorities, headed by Lieut. Col. Wallace M. Craigie and three officers from the faculty of the University of Maryland Reserve Officers Training Corps.

Dr. Elmer S. Newton, principal of Western High School, presented the Allison Nailor Medal to Capt. William Brandenburg, captain of Company H, first-place winner, and a silk flag to Guide Sergt. T. Klomparens of Company H.

Capt. Hollis Kushman of Company L and Capt. Robert Kibler of Company K, second and third-place winners, were awarded ribbons for their companies.

Western's clean sweep took on added significance as the last drill in which two of its faculty members will participate. Dr. Newton will retire at the end of this year, and Lieut. George A. Hawkins, faculty director of the cadets, will enter the Army.

Companies D of Central, B of Anacostia and G of Western placed fourth, fifth and sixth, respectively.

Pitcher Tobin of Braves Hits 3 Homers; Dodgers' Davis Hurls 2-Hitter; Nats Lose

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Detroit, May 12.—The other day when President Ed Barrow of the Yankees observed on his seventy-fourth birthday, that the ball players he has signed in his time would make a formidable all-star team, there was unanimous agreement that they would, indeed. Barrow reeled off an imposing list of players, all but one of whom had worn Yankee uniforms.

POVICH

Gehrig would be his first baseman, and Joe Gordon his second baseman, said Barrow. For his shortstop, he'd pick Hans Wagner, who never played for the Yankees but who was inducted into baseball by Barrow nevertheless. He found Wagner slinging stones from a schlag pile and signed him to play for his Paterson, N. J., team. He'd have Red Rolfe for his third baseman, and for an outfield he could lay claim to Ruth, DiMaggio and Combs. Dickey, of course, would be his catcher.

Pitching for that all-Barrow team would be Waite Hoyt, Charlie Ruffing, Lefty Gomez and Bullet Joe Bush, as expert a staff as ever wore the same club's uniform. Barrow's team would have everything—pitching, slug, speed and defense.

It would be a great ball team, opined Mike Martin, white-haired trainer of the Nats, but . . . Martin could pick a team to lick that Barrow club, if not every day in the week, then at least most days in the week.

Martin, now in his fortieth year as a big league trainer, says he wouldn't have to go beyond the American League to pick a club that figured to beat the all-Barrow team on any given day. "And over the course of a season, I think my club would run away from Barrow's," said Martin.

"I'd have a better pitching staff than Barrow's to start with," Martin was saying, "and I'm taking nothing away from Ruffing and Gomez and Pennock and Hoyt and those guys of his. It just happens that there have been better pitchers than that gang in the American League.

"The team I could name would have an edge every day in the pitcher's box. My pitchers would be Walter Johnson and Rube Waddell and Lefty Grove and Bob Feller and Barrow doesn't have anything to match them. Fred Marberry would be my relief pitcher and that would be another big help, but I don't think Marberry would have much work to do."

For his first baseman, Martin would struggle along with Jimmy Foxx "who in his prime was just as dangerous a hitter as Gehrig and as good around first base. And at second base my man would be Charley Gehringer. I'd say Gehringer could do everything that Joe Gordon can do around second, and he'd be a good bet to outhit Gordon by 50 points."

"Barrow would have the edge on my club at shortstop," says Martin. "I'll admit that Wagner was far out in front of any other shortstop who ever lived. But I'd be willing to have on my club the Joe Cronin of 1933, before he had slowed up, and when he was banging runs across the plate."

His third baseman, Martin says, would be Cecil Travis, "who would outplay Red Rolfe, all things considered. Rolfe would have the edge on fielding bunts, and he'd have a little more polish, but Travis would have the better throwing arm and he'd give my club more power than Rolfe would give Barrow's."

Even with such an imposing Barrow outfield as Ruth, DiMaggio and Combs, Martin says it is no great task to name a better one. "How about Speaker, Cobb and Simmons," he said. "Nobody can claim that Barrow's outfield could outhit those three. Barrow's outfield would have better throwing arms, but that's where its superiority would end. My gang wouldn't hit as many home runs, perhaps, but they'd get more hits, and for all they say about DiMaggio, I think that Al Simmons was the greatest right-handed hitter who ever lived."

Martin went on to add some interesting comment on the hypothetical clashes of the two mythical teams. "I wouldn't have much choice about pitching left handers or right handers against the Yankees. Ruth used to murder Lefty Grove, so there wouldn't be any percentage in pitching a lefthander like him or Waddell against Barrow's club.

"My catcher would be Mickey Cochrane, and who is going to say that Dickey is a better catcher. My club would have more spirit and hustle than Barrow's, I think. Cobb was a rip-snorter, and Simmons was much the same type. Joe Cronin was a ball of fire on that field, too, and Cochrane had more hustle than Dickey. Even with Ruth on Barrow's club, my team would have the most color, and I think the fans would like it better."

It'll Be an 'Artistic' Job at Garden

CONSIDINE

The literate, articulate young man, who retired from boxing two years ago at the ripe old age of 21, will meet 135-pound Champion Sammy Angott. Stolz has never boxed 15 rounds in his life. He has gone 12 rounds only once. He is a little on the booksy side, shoots golf in the low 80's and on Jacobs Beach has been mistaken for a studious young reporter. He gets gastrically ill before his fights.

How, then, can this young hypochrondriac with artistic leanings be fighting for a bloody crown once worn by Gans, Leonard and Canzoneri? Well, sir, it's this way:

He was a sickly child as a kid in Newark, N. J., so his envy of stronger, lustier kids—with their street brawls and big talk—made him want to be one of them. His early heroes were Canzoneri and Jimmy McLarnin. He never wanted to be Babe Ruth. He wanted to be lightweight champion of the world.

It was, of course, an idle dream. His family sent him through art school in Newark, and his life seemed pretty well laid out. But he used to patronize his "Y" pretty regularly and when he got up to around 100 pounds he started boxing.

Big Boys Took a Shine to Allie

Now some pretty good fighters used to hang around that particular "Y," including Frankie Genaro, once flyweight champion. They took an interest in the earnest, good-natured, studious kid—because he'd listen to what they told him. By the time he was 16 he had mastered the rudiments of boxing well enough to enter an amateur tournament. To the astonishment of everyone, including himself, he won the 112-pound amateur championship of New Jersey. As a Golden Glover he was beaten only once during his amateur career.

His approach to boxing was, and is, almost like Tunney's, or Carl Snavely's, for he studies fight films by the hour. As a kid with only carfare, he'd come in from Newark, wriggle into the Garden and other New York clubs and watch his idols. He'd study their style, their footwork. He haunted the gyms where the good fighters trained, taking notes of what they had that he didn't have.

One afternoon at Stillman's Gym he politely asked Willie Ketcham, the trainer, if he might box with Lou Salica—Willie's charge. Lou was the bantam champ at the time. It so happens that he was looking for some kid to punch around, that day, so Stoltz got his chance. Now Ketcham liked the good-looking kid, so he took Salica aside and asked him to take it easy: that the kid was just a beginner.

A Blizzard Struck Mr. Salica

Well, they started off and in less than a round Salica found himself forced to go at full speed to protect himself from the blizzard of leather thrown at him by Stolz. Lou in time had to clinch with Stolz. He pinioned Stolz's flying arms, looked out at Ketcham, and wheezed, "You kiddin' me? This ain't no amachoor."

Hymie Caplin took Allie under his wing. Allie turned pro and was doing very nicely. But he was always suffering from real or imagined pains. He decided he had the worst sinus trouble ever studied by the medical profession. He didn't, but Allie kept believing it. He became a leading customer for all drug store panaceas. And then retired to his drawing board. He fought only once in 15 months. He won that fight easily, but it didn't prod him back into boxing.

Abe Greene, the capable president of the National Boxing Association, had much to do with Stolz's decision to come back. Greene talked to the boy, talked him out of a lot of imagined illnesses, and got the glove back on him. The very real illness of Allie's father made it necessary for Allie to earn money quickly, too.

So he came back almost reluctantly—and embarked on a streak which has seen him lose only one fight since March of 1941. He reversed that decision, and won from such men as Pete Scalzo, the former featherweight champion who had once knocked him out, and Bobby Ruffin, who had beaten him.

Now he's one step away from a goal that is almost beyond compare in boxing. The lightweight division has been crummied up, of late by Lew Jenkins and duplication of titular claims, but it retains a certain sheen that no other division except the heavyweight class has.

This grinning, sensitive Stolz would be popular, but the boys along the beach don't think he can make it. They say Angott is too wise and durable for him. But stranger things have happened in the Garden. Frank Erne, the classic lightweight of 40 years ago, has been schooling Stolz lately and swears the kid does things in the ring that no lightweight has done since Erne's day.

Cincinnati Retired In Order for Last 6 Innings; Victors Rout Vander Meer

By the Associated Press

Brooklyn, May 13.—Curt Davis, 35-year-old righthander, today delivered the league leading Brooklyn Dodgers' retort to yesterday's 1-hit pitching performance by Gene Thompson of the Cincinnati Reds.

The verteran delivered an effective 2-hitter and retired the Reds in succession in the last six innings to achieve a 4-0 shutoout for his fourth triumph of the season.

Johnny Vander Meer, who had won his last start without issuing a single base on balls, made up for it today with a spell of wildness that helped the Dodgers score all their runs in the first four frames and finally brought big Paul Derringer to the mound in a relief role.

The star southpaw retired the first five men he faced and then the trouble started. With two out in the second he walked Dolph Camilli. Mickey Owen and Peewee Reese hit singles for one run. Another was forced across by successive walks to Davis and Billy Herman and the count went to 3 and 2 on Arky Vaughan before he grounded out to end the inning.

Pete Reiser, John Rizzo and Joe Medwick all hit singles to load the bases with none out in the third, but Vandy squeezed out of the jam at the cost of only one run. Camilli forced Reiser at the plate, Rizzo tallied on an infield out and Reese forced Camilli.

Davis opened the fourth with a single, Herman walked and after Vaughan popped up trying to sacrifice, Reiser singled for a run. Derringer, making his first appearance since a sinus attack sent him to a hospital, and Clyde Shoun checked the Dodgers the rest of the way.

Player Limit Is Extended Due to War

By the Associated Press

Chicago, May 13.—Baseball Commissioner Kenesaw Mountain Landis today notified the American and National Leagues that the player limit deadline has been extended to May 25 as a war measure.

Normally the limit for cutting player squads to 25 men would have become effective at midnight tonight, one month after the opening of the season.

Landis is in the hospital fighting off a chest cold. Will Harridge, president of the American League, said the extension was necessary because of the large number of players up for Army call.

"Some of our clubs," Harridge explained, "face a tough situation with players called up for examination for military duty. Their status might not be determined for another week. Meanwhile if we released players to observe the deadline rule and some of the active players were taken for military service, clubs would find themselves shorthanded."

Harridge said he conferred with Ford Frick, president of the National League, by long-distance telephone this morning and the two agreed to ask Commissioner Landis for an extension. The commissioner readily gave his consent.

Cards Collect 15 Hits to Rout Phils, 9 to 1

Philadelphia, May 13.—Held scoreless in 20 of their previous 29 innings, the St. Louis Cardinals slammed out 15 hits today to wallop the Phils, 9 to 1, and end a four-game losing streak.

Lon Warneke hurled a masterful five-hitter to chalk up his second straight triumph. The Phils' lone tally came in the first inning on Danny Litwhiler's seventh homer of the season.

Jimmy Brown, Stan Musial and Enos Slaughter rapped out three hits apiece off the offerings of Si Johnson, Ike Pearson and Walt Beck. The fourth Phils' hurler, pitched two hitless innings.

Newsom, Nats Lose To Detroit, 6 to 2

Harold Newhouser, Bobo's Former Victim, Outpitches Him as 10,500 Fans Cheer

By Shirley Povich

Post Staff Writer

Detroit, May 13.—Buck Newsom took his swagger and little else to the mound against the Tigers today and spent a very unhappy afternoon. He was outpitched by Skinny Harold Newhouser and the Nats took a 6-2 beating before 10,500 anti-Newsom Detroit fans.

Newhouser, Newsom's victim last week in the memorable one-hit triumph turned in by Big Buck against his former pals, grabbed all of today's pitching honors. He held the Nats to three lonesome hits while the Tigers were strafing Newsom for nine before he retired at the end of seven innings.

Newsom perspired hotly and gave doggedly but his fast ball wasn't baffling the Tigers. Twice during the game they exploded three consecutive hits against him, with Roger Cramer, former Nat, doing most of the damage.

Former Nats Spiteful

Cramer, who in 29 games this season, had driven in only six runs, moved three runs across the plate with his pair of hits against Newsom. Jimmy Bloodworth, another former employe of Clark Griffith, contributed to Newsom's unhappy day with two important blows.

The Nats scored two runs because Bobby Estalella banged his fourth home run of the season into the left field seats with Campbell on base in the fifth inning. A bit previously, Campbell had singled to center for the Nats' first hit off Newhouser. Those two hits were all the Nats could claim until Stan

Hoag's Single In 10th Wins For Chisox, 2-1

By the Associated Press

Chicago, May 13.—Myril Hoag's tenth-inning single today scored Joe Kuhel and gave Chicago's reviving White Sox a 2-to-1 victory over the Boston Red Sox in the only game of their curtailed series.

The win was the third in the last four starts for the Sox, who previously had taken only four of 22 games.

For eight innings the game was a scoreless pitching duel between Charley Wagner and Johnny Humphries. Boston got to Humphries for one run in the ninth when Hal Finney doubled and Bobby Doerr singled. Johnny Peacock followed with another double and Joe Haynes came to the rescue, accomplishing the three outs—the third by fanning Jimmy Foxx with the bases loaded.

Haynes got credit for the victory when the Sox tied the score in their half of the ninth and went on to win in the tenth, singles by Don Kolloway and Pinch Hitter George Dickey tied the score.

A's Score 5 Runs in Fifth, Edge Browns

By International News Service

St. Louis, May 13.—The Philadelphia Athletics scored five runs in the third inning today, and the St. Louis Browns kept whittling away at that lead but didn't whittle hard enough and finally lost the loosely played ball game, 10 to 9.

However, the A's didn't have clear sailing, four errors and a dozen walks contributed by four pitchers, keeping them in hot water. The Browns committed three errors, and used a half-dozen pitchers. Thirty-three players, 19 of them Brownies, saw action.

Russ Christopher was the winning pitcher, getting his third victory of the season. The triumph moved the Athletics into fifth place, ahead of the Washington Senators who lost to Detroit today, in the American League standings.

Successive Blows Beat Cubs, 6 to 5

Knuckle Ball Star Makes It 4 Homers In 5 Appearances; Gives Up 5 Safeties

By the Associated Press

Boston, May 13.—Jim Tobin, the veteran righthander, set a new major league home-run slugging record for pitchers today by blasting out three consecutive circuit drives for a total of four runs while hurling the Boston Braves to a 6-5 victory over the Chicago Cubs.

Tobin, who lost three of his seven previous starts because his mates were unable to hit behind him, won his own game in the eighth by homering after Paul Waner had singled. He opened the fifth and seventh frames for the Braves by clearing the left field fence.

4 Homers in 5 Trips

While duplicating a feat that, as far as the record books reveal, was performed only by Pitcher Guy Hecker for the Louisville American Association Club back in 1886, Tobin hit four homers in his last five turns at bat.

He poled out his second of the season as a pinch-hitter against the Cubs yesterday.

As a result of today's prodigious clubbing, Jim, rated as Casey Stengel's ace moundsman, became that manager's top hitter with an average of .407 for his 27 turns at the plate.

While so doing, Tobin also took particular pains with his pitching chores. He limited the Cubs to five hits and three passes and two earned runs. A single, two errors and another safe hit gave the Cubs a pair of runs in the third inning. In the sixth, Bill Nicholson put the Cubs into a 4-2 lead by homering after Stan Hack had opened that frame with a single. The Cubs collected their fifth run in the ninth, when pinch-hitter Glen Russell drove in Phil Cavaretta with a double.

Pittsburgh Gains Split In Series

Rookie Dave Koslo Blanks Pirates for 6 Innings, But Is Routed in Seventh

By International News Service

New York, May 13.—Max Butcher held the Giants to six hits today to pitch the Pirates to a 3-to-1 triumph and an even break in the two-game series.

Supported brilliantly in the tough spots, Dave Koslo, rookie southpaw from Milwaukee, blanked the Bucs for six innings but was batted out in the seventh before one runner had been retired. Elliott initiated the session with a double, Vince DiMaggio walked and Fletcher beat out a liner to Mize, who knocked the ball down but couldn't field it. Rookie Johnny Barrett then doubled to score two runs. Ace Adams relieved Koslo and got Fletcher at the plate on an attempted squeeze. Barrett scored on Butcher's fly to center.

Manager Frankie Frisch of the Pirates was ousted in the seventh after a protracted oral war with Umpire Beans Reardon. It was Frisch's third banishment this season.

Bright Willie Captures $5000 Swift Stakes

Son of Brilliant Scores by Two Lengths And Pays $3.40; Earns $6825 Purse

By the Associated Press

Belmont Park, N. Y., May 13.—Bright Willie, which Mrs. Ralph McIlvain acquired for $1750 at a Louisville paddock sale little more than a year ago, today won the 7-furlong Swift Stakes, first of the 3-year-old specials scheduled at the current meeting. Fifth victorious favorite in six races decided at $3.40 for $2, the son of Brilliant cut out a dazzling pace and easily made good by two lengths. His share of the purse was $6825.

Wishbone, from Warren Wright's Calumet Farm, was a strong finishing second, another two lengths better than William Ziegler, jr.'s, slow-starting Wait a Bit. Bright Willie was clocked in 1:24 flat and his triumph was witnessed by 15,067 fans.

Most of the dozen starters in the Swift are well engaged in coming stakes here. Bright Willie qualified handsomely for the Withers and Peter Pan Handicap, his two Belmont objectives. Wishbone, somewhat obscured by his stablemate, Sun Again and Some Chance, as a juvenile but winner of a sprint at Louisville in his only previous 1942 outing, also merited a chance to run in those fixtures and possibly the Belmont Stakes.

Bright Willie, a flashy performer in Florida last winter and recently a good sprint winner at Jamaica, today rushed into an unbeatable lead in short order. The teletimer showed him stepping the quarter in :22 3-5, the half in :45 4-5 and the 6 furlongs in 1:10 4-5, never in danger. Wishbone battled his way into contention around the last turn. He easily staved off the belated bid of Wait a Bit.

Al Au Feu, $46.40, led Mission Step home by three lengths in the closing event. Hoptown Lass was third. The favored Histrionic went lame and was pulled up in the stretch.

Count Basie to Play 'King Joe,' Honoring Louis

Count Basie and his orchestra will give the local dedication of his new blues song, "King Joe," honoring Heavyweight Champion Joe Louis, Friday when he starts a week's engagement at the Howard Theater here.

The song was conceived last January shortly after Louis was inducted into the Army. Count Basie wrote the music and Richard Wright, author of the book, "The Native Son," supplied the lyrics. Paul Robeson, the famous singer, did the vocals for a record now being distributed.

Landon Beaten By St. Albans And Elliott, 2-0

Earl Elliott allowed one hit yesterday in pitching the St. Alban's baseball team to a 2-0 victory over Landon Preps nine on the losers diamond. Fagan was the losing pitcher, giving up six hits in the seven inning game.

It was the Saints second straight triumph in the Interstate Athletic Conference and gave them undisputed possession of first place with two wins and no losses.

With two out in the last inning Lew Crawford singled with the bases loaded to drive in the winning runs. Two singles and a walk had filled the bases.

Jack Beatty ruined a no-hit ball game for Elliott when he banged out a single in the last inning with no one on base.

Di Mag Only Problem As Tribe Stops Yanks

Joe's 2 Homers Mar 'Chubby' Dean's 7-2 Victory; End Champs' 7-Game Streak

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, May 13.—Lovill (Chubby) Dean stopped all of the New York Yankees except Joe DiMaggio today and pitched the Cleveland Indians to a 7-to-2 victory that brought them within half a game of the world champions, who were riding the crest of a seven-game winning streak.

Dean, a southpaw with a long record as a nuisance to the Yanks, allowed New York only six hits and would have had a shutout except for home runs in the seventh and ninth innings by DiMaggio. They were his sixth and seventh-round-trippers of the season.

It was Dean's second victory without a defeat and he made it the more impressive for 10,000 fans by fanning six of the Yanks and walking only one.

Tribe Shells Gomez

The Indians waded into Lefty Gomez, who had beaten them five times without a setback last year, and bunched three runs in the fourth and two in the seventh. Then they added two more off John Lindell in the eighth.

The first flurry started modestly enough with a walk to Oris Hockett and a single by Buster Mills. Lou Boudreau and Jeff Heath both fanned, but Mills stole second and Les Fleming walked to fill the bases. Then Ken Keltner lifted a short fly which escaped Charley Keller for a double scoring all three runners.

In the seventh Fleming singled and was sacrificed to second. Ray Mack was hit by a pitched ball and after two were out, Dean doubled for two runs. A walk to Boudreau, a triple by Heath and a single by Keltner accounted for the final runs.

Navy's Rally Beats Temple; 9th in a Row

By the Associated Press

Annapolis, Md., May 13.—Coming from behind with a five-run eighth inning rally, Navy's baseball team scampered to its ninth straight victory, topping Temple, 6 to 3, today.

Behind 3-2 when the eighth opened, despite splendid four-hit twirling by Middie Lou Luberda, Navy lashed savagely at Temple's Andy Tomasic, collecting four hits and capitalizing on two crucial Owl errors.

Luberda's mighty three-bagger, following Lefty Lavrakas' single in the fifth, had put the Middies back in the ball game after Temple started with a tally in the first. The Owls made Harold Gotwals' triple, an error and Joe Onestis double good for two seventh-inning scores.

Paul Lacy's double, singles by Watson Gillis, Frank Schettino and Lavrakas, and errors by Tomasic and Second Baseman Joe Chielli contributed to Navy's winning rally. The setback was Temple's fifth in 13 starts.

Ticket Sale for Navy Show Picks Up; Lou Nova Has Scare

Sparmate's Hand Is Cut In Training

Razor Is Found In Glove; Nova Not Hurt; Fighters Arrive Tomorrow

By Tony Neri

With the Navy Relief boxing show only a week off, ring fans of the Nation's Capital are beginning to talk about this outstanding card. After a slow advance sale, business at the box office has been brisk and it is believed that next Thursday night's show will turn over a healthy amount to Navy Relief. The entire net profits will go to the worthy cause.

The two main-event principals, Lou Nova of California, and Lee Savold of Des Moines, Iowa, will be on the scene by tomorrow night to take up training quarters for the fight. Already on the grounds are the local boys Steve Mamakos, who fights Georgie Abrams in a 10 rounder; Frankie Wills, who meets Sammy Magro in a six, and Jimmy DeChard, who fights Frankie Poreda in an eight.

Two more matches will be closed with the Lightweights Billy Banks and Oscar Wright as principals. Their opponents will be announced by the end of the week.

Meanwhile, reports from New York say that Nova received a scare in a training session at Stillman's gymnasium when it was found after his drill with Lee Lundley that a razor blade had been inserted in Lundley's glove, which nearly severed two of the Negro sparring-mate's left fingers. How and why a razor blade was put into the glove nobody was able to ascertain, but if the fight session hadn't been stopped upon Lundley's insistence serious injury to Nova would have wrecked the show here. As it was, Lundley had to be rushed to a New York hospital for treatment.

Lundley, who is known in fight circles as Kid Norfolk, had complained to his trainer that something sharp kept hurting his left hand during the first round of fighting. After Lundley had finished his second round, the glove was removed. Blood was pouring from the wounds, and Whitey Bimstein, a trainer, administrated first aid before Lundley was taken to the hospital.

Nova Fortunate

It was fortunate for Nova that his sparmate had favored the hand when he felt first pains. If he had hit Nova with any kind of a hard blow the razor may have cut through his glove and probably caused severe facial or body cuts.

Savold will arrive tonight and work at the Knights of Columbus gym where Mamakos is drilling under Manager Matt Twomey. Nova will be here tomorrow and take up his quarters at Uline Arena Saturday. Savold has been training at Greenwood Lake, N. Y., Joe Louis' favorite drill site.

With Billy Conn out of the heavyweight picture, temporarily, the 10-rounder here takes on a more respective light. For with Bob Pastor the only likely heavyweight around for a shot at Joe Louis, Promoter Mike Jacobs may instead give the winner of the Navy show a crack at the champion in June. Although Pastor is the likely fighter to get the coveted shot, he's already fought Louis twice, and Jacobs may not want that match for the present at least.

Nova isn't taking Savold too lightly. Neither is he going to let the Des Moines heavyweight stand in his way to another shot at the championship. Lou, dead serious, has shelved that yogi business and when he steps into the Griffith Stadium ring next Thursday night one objective will be foremost in his mind—the knockout of Savold—which he believes will give him his second chance against Louis.

Tickets for the Navy show, priced at $2.50, $4, $6 and $10, are on sale at Griffith Stadium.

Walkathon To Aid Fund For Soldiers

Ray Alvis and Shep Shapiro, who are staging the Walkathon at Turner's Arena, have offered the servicemen's ticket fund 10 per cent of the Walkathon's receipts of next Monday night.

Alvis, who promoted the Joe Louis-Buddy Baer fight here last summer, was heartily in accord with the ticket fund and it was his idea that the Walkathon should do its bit toward helping servicemen in nearby camps in seeing the Navy relief boxing show at Griffith Stadium next Thursday night.

This fund, now amounting to $304, is buying tickets to the show and distributing same to sailors, soldiers and marines.

Yesterday's donation of $5 was from a well-wisher who didn't sign his name.

The Post's boxing writer, who is taking care of the fund, received five requests from servicemen for tickets. Tickets are in the mail for them. It is hoped that the fund will provide for a healthy turnout of the men in uniform. Readers can help. Send contributions to Tony Neri, of the sports department. A boy in the service will appreciate this courtesy.

Cardinals Face LaSalle Today

Catholic University's track team, recent winner of the Mason-Dixon championships for the fourth straight year, will engage LeSalle College of Philadelphia in a dual meet today at 2:30 at Brookland. The Cards are undefeated in dual competition, having won four decisions. Their lone defeat of the year was at the hands of Navy and Villanova in a triangular affair.

Awaits Clash in Navy Show Here

Williams' Draft Board Says Case Is Closed

Minneapolis Selective Service Officials Surprised at News Bosox Star May Be Called

By the Associated Press

Chicago, May 13.—For a couple of hours today the draft status of Ted Williams seemed up in the air again, but it appears now the Boston Red Sox star won't be called right away.

Word from Cleveland that Maj. Ernest M. Culligan, public relations officer of the Selective Service System, had said Williams "probably" would be taken in his draft board's next call caught the slugging outfielder by surprise.

"I can't understand it," Ted said. "I haven't heard anything like that from my draft board in Minneapolis.

His draft board at Minneapolis apparently shared Williams' surprise. Chairman George W. Price immediately declared Ted still was in a deferred classification and there was no intention of reopening his case.

Williams Pleased

Told at Comiskey Park, where the Red Sox lost to the Chicago White Sox, of his board chairman's statement, Ted laughed happily.

"I was afraid," he said, "we were getting all mixed up again. Now I can go to work."

Williams was reclassified late last February by a Presidential appeal board, from 1-A to 3-A because of his support of his mother. His draft board chairman said the fact Williams had drawn a month's baseball pay did not alter his status.

Price said the board's next call would be some time in June and that reopening of his case was not under consideration.

The Minnesota draft headquarters also said the case was closed. It pointed out, however, that the National Selective Service director can order the board to reopen the case, but said no such order had been received.

Case Appealed

Major Culligan, commenting on the draft board's statements, said national headquarters is not stepping into the case without a request for reclassification, but added that Williams may be among the many registrants who are being reclassified.

The Presidential appeal two months ago was made, Ted said, with his consent, but not at his insistence. The Red Sox slugger felt that many fans misunderstood and believed he had pushed through the appeal request.

"Boy, things have been going swell," Ted explained today, referring to the public's reaction and also showing off how he would pitch.

Lou Plummer, Lewis Feature Card Tonight

Ed (Strangler) Lewis, one time world's wrestling champion, and "Gentleman Lou" Plummer, of the United States Coast Guard, take over the spotlight tonight at Riverside Stadium, Twenty-sixth and D Streets Northwest, clashing in a one-hour time limit feature match on the "Ladies Night" program.

Lewis and Plummer are meeting for the first time, and the edge no doubt will go to the latter who was probably a spectator in knee pants when the ex-champion was knocking over the opposition with monotonous regularity years ago.

There'll be a goodly gathering of the fairer sex tonight, inasmuch as Promoter Joe Turner will admit all feminine fans for a service charge of 25 cents when accompanied by male escorts. Turner hopes to revive the interest among the ladies that was prevalent back in the old auditorium days.

Plummer Prances

Plummer's chest has inflated considerably since he joined up with the Coast Guard, and the cocky South Bend villain is expected to loose all of his mat fury on the Strangler.

As a reward for winning, Plummer has been promised a title match with Sandor Szabo, the former National Wrestling Association champion.

Lewis returned to active competition shortly after the Japs struck at Pearl Harbor, and since then has beaten Big Jim Henry and dropped a close one to Ray Steele at the Arena, besides wrestling in other Eastern and Midwestern towns. The Strangler is awaiting an Army appointment, and is due to teach the soldiers wrestling and jujitsu.

In a two-man team bout Maurice LaChappelle and Ace Freeman will tackle Henry Kulkovich and Rudy LaDitzi. Tommy O'Toole, conqueror of Joe Cox, will face Lee Hening of Iowa and Jim Austeri and Max Krauser will open the show at 9 p. m. Tickets are available at Riverside, REpublic 4020.

Fort Meade Holds Boxing Show Tonight

Fort Meade will be the scene tonight of that Army camp's second boxing show and two leading lightweights will be pitted in the 10-round main event. This attraction pairs Texas Lee Harper, a member of the 245th Coast Artillery of Fort Hancock, and Lou Bodish of Edgewood Arsenal.

The referees for the show are Heavyweight Red Burman and Featherweight Harry Jeffra, former titleholder. The pro pugilists will journey over from Baltimore, their home.

Harper, considered one of the top men in his class, has defeated Chalky Wright, Bobby Ruffin and Allie Stolz. The latter lightweight is meeting Champion Sammy Angott in the Garden tomorrow night for the lightweight championship.

Bodish, holder of 35 knockout victories before entering the Army, is ranked eighth by Ring Magazine in his division. He figures to give Harper a good fight, although he'll enter the ring the underdog. Both boys will probably scale 140 pounds.

Other matches will pair Heavyweight Todd Cole of Aberdeen, with Max Hale of the Holabird Quartermaster Depot; Horace Thompson of the U. S. S. Cumberland, against Bob McWilliams of Langley Field; Gaston Miller of Fort Meade, vs. Joe Myers of Langley Field; Sammy DiTasquale of Holabird, vs. Dom Fiorentino of Fort Meade; Willie Morris of the U. S. S. Cumberland, vs. Charlies Manning of Aberdeen; G. E. Graves of the U. S. S. Cumberland, vs. Howie Harris of Fort Meade, and Heschel Junior of Aberdeen, vs. Jess Harris of the U. S. S. Cumberland.

In all there are 41 rounds of boxing.

Ed Dudley, president of the Professional Golfers Association, played the Burning Tree course while on a visit to the city yesterday and bettered par figures by a stroke with 1 under par 71.

DUDLEY

Dudley paired with Representative Richard Kleberg of Texas, and defeated host pro Lewis Worsham, jr., and John S. Brookes, 1 up, despite a 3 under par 69 by Worsham.

Dudley talked to Wiffy Cox, Congressional pro and Middle Atlantic P. G. A. president, by telephone, and may get together with Cox if he is able to extend his visit.

The big fellow with the picture golf swing, first big-time golfer ever to head the P. G. A., is scheduled to meet with the local body at its next meeting, June 1, in Baltimore. He recently left his winter post at the Augusta Masters Club.

Street Car and Bus Lines Reach 10 District Area Golf Courses

Public Vehicles Miss Only 6 Clubs; Close to 4 Others

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

Golfers at the 20 major clubs in Metropolitan Washington can reach 10 of the courses by streetcar or bus with only a walk up the driveway; face a short jaunt of a half-mile from the bus lines to four others while six have little or no transportation facilities a survey revealed yesterday.

Manor, Congressional, Burning Tree, Prince Georges, Fairfax, and, strangley enough, East Potomac, are the unlucky clubs without public conveyances within a mile of the club, although Fairfax and East Potomac have bus service on Sundays. The latter club is closest to the heart of the city yet the Bureau of Engraving street car runs closest to the club and that about a mile away. The Hains Point bus serves on Sundays.

With gas rationing in effect tomorrow golf figures to be one of the first sports, if not the first, to suffer, particularly the outlying country clubs. Streetcars and buses will help out, but to date most of the club members have been making arrangements to meet at central locations and four or five drive out in one car. That is the logical solution while there is some gas to be allotted.

Equipment Is Problem

Capital Transit, Suburban Bus & Cab Co., Washington-Virginia-and-Maryland Coach Co., and Alexandria-Barcroft and Washington buses will serve the various clubs.

The ten fortunate clubs with bus or streetcar service right past the driveway are Anacostia, Bradley Hills, Bannockburn, Chevy Chase, Columbia, Indian Spring, Kenwood, Washington, White Flint and Woodmont. The four which will require a short walk are Argyle, Army and Navy, Belle Haven and Rock Creek.

Country Club members with lockers will undoubtedly find it practicable to use bus and streetcar lines but those who must carry golf bags, shoes, light bags and other paraphenalia will think twice before lugging their equipment out to the club. The equipment problem will be particularly true of tournaments.

But you can bet your bottom dollar that if there is a conceivable way to get to the golf club, the golfers will make it.

ANACOSTIA—Regular Capital Transit Bus Service from Eleventh Street and New York Avenue. Busses marked: "Anacostia," "Congress Heights," "Bellevue," "5th and Nichols" and "Bolling Field."

ARGYLE—Capital Transit Bus marked Four Corners goes within six-tenths of a mile of club. Arrangements may be made for jitney bus to meet members at District Line, Georgia and Alaska Avenues.

ARMY AND NAVY—Arnold Line, Washington, Virginia and Maryland Coach Co. busses marked "14th and Quincy" pass within three and a half blocks of club. Terminal Eleventh Street, between E and F.

BELLE HAVEN — Alexandria, Barcroft and Washington busses marked "National Airport, Alexandria," pass near Belle Haven. Terminal Tenth and D Streets Nortwest.

BRADLEY HILLS—Suburban Bus and Taxi Line buses marked "Bradley Boulevard" leave both Connecticut and Wisconsin Avenue Capital Transit terminals. Regular service.

BURNING TREE—No public transportation facilities.

BANNOCKBURN—Capital Transit Co.'s "Cabin John" street car runs past driveway. Leaves Union Station.

COLUMBIA—Same as Chevy Chase.

CONGRESSIONAL — Station wagon meets members at Chevy Chase Circle and caddie bus meets boys at Friendship Station. No public facilities direct to club.

EAST POTOMAC—Capital Transit Co. "Bureau of Engraving" streetcar is nearest conveyance to club on weekdays. "Hains Point" bus goes by door on Sundays. Street car line is about a mile from club.

FAIRFAX—Alexandria, Barcroft and Washington has bus past Fairfax on Sunday, leaving Ninth and Constitution Avenue. Also irregular weekday service.

INDIAN SPRING—Capital Transit buses leave District Line at Georgia Avenue marked "Four Corners," right by door.

PRINCE GEORGE—Capital Transit Cheverly bus stops 1½ miles from club on Landover Road, while Pennsylvania Railroad local train to Landover is closer, and is being used by some members at present.

KENWOOD—Suburban bus and and taxi line buses make circle in driveway at Kenwood, right to doorstep of club. Marked "Kenwood." Leave from Chevy Chase Circle.

MANOR—Manor members must figure way to meet Capital Transit buses at Wheaton or Rockville, about 5 and 3 miles from club, respectively. Wheaton line is new and route is Connecticut Avenue from Chevy Chase Circle.

ROCK CREEK—Capital Transit bus lines out Sixteenth Street marked "Georgia and Alaska Avenues." Stop short walk from club.

WASHINGTON — Twenty-minute service by Washington, Virginia and Maryland coaches from Eleventh and F Streets Northwest terminal marked "Walker Chapel." Buses run in front of club.

WHITE FLINT AND GEORGETOWN PREP—Capital Transit buses marked "Rockville" run in front of club. Out Wisconsin Avenue from Ninth Street and Constitution Avenue terminal.

WOODMONT — Capital Transit buses run by door on Wisconsin Avenue marked "Woodmont," "Rockville," and "Health Center."

Goat of Nats' 24 Series Win Among First to Honor Griff

There's no sentiment in baseball? Well, listen to this.

The first man from the ranks of ball players, or former ball players, to purchase tickets for the Clark C. Griffith testimonial luncheon at the Mayflower Hotel Wednesday afternoon, May 27, at 12:30 o'clock turned up yesterday. He was Jack Bentley, former slugging pitcher of the New York Giants who was the property of Griffith and the Washington club in 1913-14-15-16.

Bentley, in case you have forgotten, is the fellow who was on the mound and charged with the defeat as the Washington club won its only world series from the New York Giants in the twelfth inning of the memorable 1924 classic against John McGraw's New York Giants. Bentley worked the last two innings for New York, while Walter Johnson stepped into a relief role for the Washington club to grab the verdict 4-3, when Earl McNeely's pebble hit scored Muddy Ruel, who had doubled, with the winning run.

"I'm glad to be the first man from the ranks of baseball to subscribe to the Griffith Testimonial, even though Griff's ball club almost broke my heart in that seventh game," Jovial Jack declared yesterday. "And, so long as I had to lose, I was glad to see Walter win."

Bentley had outpitched Johnson in a previous game in that series, 6 to 2.

What Jack Bentley failed to say was that he was one of the greatest combination pitchers and home run hitters in minor league history with Jack Dunn's Baltimore Orioles prior to being purchased by the New York Giants for approximately $100,000. He also played first base and the outfield for Baltimore.

Tickets for the Griffith Testimonial are available at the Navy Relief Society, 1721 I Street Northwest, and reservations may be made through Executive 0040. They are priced at $2.50 each.

Light of Morn Upsets Roman Boy in Charles Town Feature

Fans' Choice Defeated by Four Lengths

Second Favorite Pays $7.40; Barraca Unexpected Winner In Opening Event

By Walter Haight
A Staff Correspondent

Charles Town, W. Va., May 13.—Light of Morn, a well-played second choice, turned on too many speed guns for seven rivals here this afternoon and won the Ranson Purse, featuring the Wednesday program. The daughter of Our General and Soft Lights finished four lengths in advance of P. H. Faulconer's Roman Boy, the short sprint champion of these parts. Light of Morn beat Roman Boy today at his own game—4½ furlongs—much to the disgust of favorite players in a crowd of 4000. Roman Boy saved the place money by outphotographing J. B. Royston's Not Sure.

Sporting the colors of R. Tariere, Light of Morn returned 7.40 for each $2 investment and was clocked in :53 2-5. The track was heavy as the result of a downpour here last night.

Roman Boy, giving from 8 to 19 pounds to his rivals, did not get away any too well. He slipped through on the inside to take command after a furlong, but Not Sure, Light of Morn and Navigation moved with him. Approaching the stretch, the race settled into a duel between Roman Boy and Light of Morn.

Jockey G. Acosta applied the whip to the filly in the stretch run and she promptly drew away from her rival to be opening plenty of daylight at the close.

The program opened with the downfall of an odds-on favorite. The combination of Marandan and Jockey Sammy Palumbo was played as if the race had already been run. Marandan finished second to Barraca, well handled by Jockey Danny Scocca, the Washington boy.

The daily double paid $160. J. L. Friedman's White Hot came from behind to win the second race and paid $7.40. J. C. Ellis' Tensleep caused an upset in the third event to complete the double and pay $25.40 in his own right.

SHOWABAL moved up menacingly and then weakened.

LIGHT OF MORN, forced to hold a position with the leaders while racing between horses, moved into a short lead midway of the turn, continued strongly and drew out readily in the stretch drive. ROMAN BOY handled his weight nicely to race in the thick of contention, but was unable to stay with the winner and barely outstayed NOT SURE. Latter set fast pace for three-eighths and then weakened. DOTTIE was ridden hard while losing ground.

Dear Al:

The horse Blue Gander, the one who was backed down from 9-1 to 3-2 here last Tuesday and then opened a city block only to stop in the stretch, was a sick horse yesterday morning. I'm wondering if he was half as sick as some of those who dumped in the money on him. We were all sorry to hear of the death of Trainer E. K. Auld's father. The Washington conditioner has horses for R. W. Hawksworth and others. Claude Feltner of Berryville and trainer for several interests here, was thrown by a pony during training hours this morning and was knocked unconscious. A preliminary examination revealed no broken bones but he was sent home. The ranks of women trainers has a new addition. Mrs. R. W. Chambers has been granted a license here to condition Poney Play. Jockey John Beedle has been called by the United States Army and he is going. Max Hirsch has turned over a pair of

Holzberg's Sub-Par 68 Tops Scores

Carroll, Wood, Alexander Help In 12-Under Par 18-Hole Score

A Washington Golf and Country Club foursome posted a best ball of 58 strokes in a late afternoon round over the hilly Virginia layout yesterday, the quartet putting together ten birdies and two eagles and missing par on two holes for the 12 under par total.

Johnny Holzberg, who would be one of the District's top amateur golfers if he had time for tournament play, was low scorer with an individual two-under par 68. His companions were Sid Carroll, assistant business manager of the Washington Redskins; Brick Wood, assistant pro and starter, and R. F. Alexander.

Alexander knocked a niblick pitch shot into the cup for an eagle two on the par 4 fifth hole while Holzberg banged a second wood shot within 4 feet of the pin on the par 5 fifteenth and dropped the putt for an eagle.

3 Birdies for Holzberg

Holzberg had three birdies, Carroll two, Alexander one and Wood four.

Holzberg and Carroll, with a best ball 66, were upset by Wood and Alexander, with a 65 although they were both 73 individually. Wood won the last hole with a par four to win the match, 1 up.

Holzberg and Wood have been carrying on an individual feud in their recent matches, with carry-over totals, and for the last four rounds Holzberg has only picked up three holes although his medal total is one under par.

Wood, who has been starting the Washington Club golfers for more than 20 years, said the best ball total was the lowest in his memory for a foursome over the Virginia course.

Tomorrow Night's Midget Card Likely Last for Long Time

Racing Director Tom Lane and Co-promoters Jack Kochman and S. F. (Red) Crise probably will bring their midget automobile racing promotions to a close for the gasoline rationing period tomorrow night when they import from 25 to 30 of the top drivers and little cars of the United States for a seven-event program at the West Lanham, Md., Speedway, 8:30 o'clock.

Outstanding on the card will be the "V for Victory" Derby, a 25-lap feature, which will complete, and climax, the program.

Lane yesterday announced that many of the stars who competed in the finest card in Lanham's history last week will be back tomorrow night. These will include Johnny Pierson, George Fonder, Charley Miller, Shorty McAndrews, Johnny Ritter, Jeep Colkitt, Elmer Sefcik, Jim Forte, Johnny Jars and Hawley Kight, to mention a few.

Tickets for tomorrow night's closing card are on sale at the Rite-Way Auto Top Co., 607-09 K Street Northwest, and reservations may be made through Metropolitan 6070.

Sub-Par Pin Finishes Gain 2 Tourney Championships

Chicago Budweisers Gain Team Crown, Milwaukeeans Doubles Title in Late Drives

By the Associated Press

Columbus, Ohio, May 13.—The "Garrison finish" counts as much in bowling as in horse racing!

At least, the Chicago Budweisers won the five-man title, and Ed Nowicki and George Baier of Milwaukee copped the doubles laurels of the 1942 American Bowling Congress Tournament with stretch splurges in the eleventh and twelfth frames.

Most bowlers say there are only 10 frames to a game, but if that's true the winners of the big crowns annexed their championships after the contest was over.

"Par" for a frame, in bowlers' parlance, is 20 sticks, manufactured through alternate strikes and spares. But, in the tenth frames of their three games, the Chicago Buds had scores of 113, 117 and 126 for a total of 356 in the final stanzas—or 56 over par for the five men. They wound up with 3131 which was good for $1500 in cash, a $1000 trophy, and five diamond-studded medals.

The St. Louis Budweisers, second-placers with 3111, missed their chance at glory with poor tenth frames, their totals for the three games in that inning being 104, 95 and 86 for 285—or 71 sticks less than the Chicagoans. The third-place Schlitz team of Milwaukee went into the tenth frames far ahead of the Chicagoans, but scored only 116, 107 and 103 in the crucial frames for 326. They lost 30 sticks to the windy city team in the stretch drive, and dropped the crown by 25 with a 3105 total.

In the doubles the stretch drive value was just as apparent. Nowicki and Baier, winners with a 1377 total, piled up 138 pins, 18 over par, in the tenth frames of their three games, to nose out Angelo Zanoni and John Seebeck, of Clifton, N. J., by a dozen sticks. The second-placers had only 119, one under par, to show for the three final stanzas, and they finished with 1365.

Exciting Ball Game Deters Would-Be Suicide in Seattle

Seattle, May 13 (AP).—Police credit an extra-inning baseball game with halting a suicide attempt by a 30-year-old housewife.

Two patrolmen, called to the woman's residence last night by neighbors, reported she turned on the gas while listening to a broadcast of the Seattle-Los Angeles Coast League game.

In the eleventh inning she became so interested she turned off the gas and by the time the game ended in a 5-5 tie four innings later she had changed her mind.

Spence singled in the ninth.

Newhouser, who had given Newsom a clever duel of it for six innings last week, didn't weaken today. The Nats didn't get on base except in the fifth inning and the ninth.

Gift Run for Tigers

The Tigers got a gift run in the first inning to take a 1-0 lead. Bruce Campbell dropped Jimmy Bloodworth's wind-blown fly in left field for a two-base error to start the inning. Newsom got two out, but York banged a single to left to get the run home.

Bloodworth banged one of Newsom's slow balls into left field for a single to start the third and it was the first of three Tiger hits. Harris singled to center, and Cramer drove home a run with a single to center. A second run scored while York was hitting into a double play.

In the fifth, the same three guys—Bloodworth, Harris and Cramer—made for trouble for Newsom. Bloodworth singled to left, Harris doubled off the right-field screen, and Cramer scored 'em both with a single to right. That rally upped the Tigers' lead to 5-2.

Detroit Gets Another

The ball that Campbell dropped in the first inning for a two-base error did queer tricks before he muffed it. . . . Campbell was poised for an easy catch when a cross-wind suddenly carried the ball away from him. . . . Buck Newsom quit throwing his slow let-up pitch after two near-disastrous tries. . . . Bloodworth rapped one of his slow balls for a single and when Newsom pitched one to Ned Harris, that fellow slugged it into the right field upper deck only a few feet foul. . . . Mike Chartak went hitless in his debut for the Nats, but he was taking lusty swings and twice sent outfielders back to the fences. . . . The Nats' three games of their current road trip have netted them, thus far, a three-game losing streak. . . . Tonight they move on to Cleveland where they open a three-game series tomorrow with Sid Hudson pitching against Mel Harder.

Minor League Clubs Given Additional Time to Pare Down

By the Associated Press

Durham, N. C., May 13.—W. G. Bramham, president of the National Association of Professional Baseball Leagues, today granted an extension of ten days to all minor league clubs for reducing their rosters to the normal player limits.

Class AA, A-1 and A clubs under the rules are required to reduce to their normal player limits 30 days after the opening of the season. They now have 40. Class B, C, and D clubs, normally paring their rosters 20 days after the season opener, now have 30 days.

Bramham said the extenson was permitted because of the entry of some players into the armed services, and was designed to aid clubs so affected by permitting them to carry replacements longer than usual.

Quantico Beats Bolling Field, 3-0

Quantico Marines defeated Bolling Field's visiting baseball team, 3-1, yesterday behind the four-hit pitching of Bradshaw.

Surster, the losers' starting pitcher, gave up four hits and two runs in his six-inning stretch. His successor, Smeirk, yielded one in three innings. Bradshaw fanned six, while Surster whiffed seven.

The two teams have been rivals for the past several years for the top of the league.

Rideout May Run in Hoyas' Special Race

Don Burnham, Dartmouth's star miler, will be unable to appear here May 25 against Leslie MacMitchell and Bill Hulse as those running stars try to crack the ¾-mile record, but Blaine Rideout is a possible starter, it was learned yesterday.

Graduate Manager of Athletics Rome Schwagel of Georgetown who will stage the race in conjunction with G. U.'s dual meet with Fordham, also announced that a third starter in the field had been obtained. The new contestant is Sterling Kehoe, University of Maryland sophomore miler.

Burnham, one of the outstanding individuals in the recent Penn Relays, will be prevented by school duties from entering the race. Rideout, half of North Texas State Teachers' great brother combination of 1939, is now at Norfolk Naval Training Station.

Schwagel said he had written Capt. A. E. King, Norfolk morale officer, inviting Rideout to enter the race. Schwagel said he believed Rideout would make an ideal competitor for MacMitchell. The former mile ace is in good condition, Schwagel points out, as attested by the 50 second quarter he turned in for Norfolk's mile relay team in a service race at the Penn Relays.

MacMitchell, Hulse and probably one other entry will race from scratch as the field seeks to crack Paul Moore's 2-year-old American record of 2 minutes 58.7 seconds, Schwagel said, with the other two men getting handicaps.

Schwagel was pondering last night a letter received from Emil von Elling, track coach of New York University, in which he suggested that his charges, MacMitchell and Hulse, run two races instead of one. The Georgetown officials said he was awaiting clarification of the suggestion from Elling.

Fiduciaries Hear Dr. Kayser

Dr. Elmer Louis Kayser of George Washington University traced the background of the present war in eastern Asia at a dinner meeting last night of the Fiduciaries section of the District Bankers Association.

Members elected an executive committee of five after Mr. Kayser's talk and the committee will meet in the near future to elect officers of the section.

"It was particularly unfortunate," said Dr. Kayser in his talk, "that at the time the European involvement began we were still largely absorbed in the problems of internal and economic reform . . . Both leadership and following find it difficult today to shift the spotlight from internal social reform to world survival."

J. Wesley Clampitt, section chairman, presided at the session which was held in the Washington Golf and Country Club.

Bank Ruling Clarified

Washington banks were advised by the Federal Reserve Board yesterday that they may renew or extend small personal loans made before May 6 without complying with the board's May 6 regulations on such loans.

Under the May 6 regulation, a single payment loan of less than $1500 cannot be renewed except on the equivalent of an installment payment basis which would assure repayment within a year of the date that the original loan was made.

New York Cotton

New York, May 13 (AP).—Cotton futures closed 5 to 20 cents a bale higher today after pursuing an irregular course most of the session. Contracts were scarce as trade and mill buying were resumed and traders responded to the unfavorable Government weekly weather report. Early local sellers reversed their position and a small amount of New Orleans buying aided the improvement. Attention was focused on Washington, especially the farm bill approved by the Senate Appropriations Committee providing increases of 32 million dollars cash and 80 million dollars in loans over amounts previously voted by the House. The measure goes to the Senate tomorrow.

Int. Nickel Net In Period Dips To $8,071,966

By the Associated Press

New York, May 13.—The International Nickel Co. of Canada, Ltd., and subsidiaries reported today for the quarter ended March 31 net profit of $8,071,966, equal, after preferred dividend requirements, to 52 cents a common share.

This compared with net earnings of $9,239,709, or 60 cents a common share, in the three months ended March 31, 1941.

Provision for income and franchise taxes in the 1942 first quarter was $6,742,543 against $6,158,473 in the like 1941 period

Robert C. Stanley, president, said the company had suspended interim letters dealing with various uses of the concern's metals and citing new developments because of Government war regulations.

Pullman Earns $3,966,444 in Period

Chicago, May 13 (AP).—Pullman, Inc., today reported net income of $3,966,444 or $1.20 a capital share for the three months ended March 31 against net income of $3,005,194 or 79 cents a capital share in the comparative 1941 months.

D. A. Crawford, president, told stockholders that provision for Federal taxes on first quarter earnings was made at assumed rates substantially in excess of those prescribed in the 1941 Revenue Act. On this basis, he said, the Federal tax provision came to $3,784,255 compared with $956,121 a year ago.

The manufacturing subsidiary of Pullman, Inc., Crawford said, has a backlog of orders for products of all kinds, including cars, ships and armament, of 478 million dollars.

Autoists Abusing Tires Warned of Rationing Penalty

Philadelphia, May 13 (AP).—William M. Hickey, president of the National Association of Independent Tire Dealers, said today that motorists and truckers who "abuse" tires will be deprived of them.

At a press conference arranged by the Office of Price Administration, Hickey quoted from an amendment to tire rationing regulations which said "no tires at all will be released after June 1 to anyone who abuses those he now has in use."

A set of standards on "use and abuse of tires" has been devised, he added, and will be released soon.

Dr. Charles F. Phillips, acting chief of the OPM tire rationing division, said that more drastic regulations concerning civilian use of tires are forthcoming.

"There shouldn't be any civilian use at this moment," he said.

Cont. Can Votes To Cut Dividend

New York, May 13 (AP).—J. F. Hartlieb, president of Continental Can Co., Inc., said today directors of the company had decided to reduce the interim dividend because of present uncertainties.

Directors declared a second quarter interim dividend of 25 cents on common stock, payable June 15 to holders of record May 25, compared with 50 cents in the previous quarter.

"Under rulings of the Government the use of tin containers for a number of products, particularly in the general line industrial containers field, is no longer permitted," Hartlieb said.

"This together with the uncertainty of taxes to apply to current earnings and the extent to which our facilities can be converted to war work," he said, "all will have a great bearing on profits this year.

Trading in Cocoa Futures to Halt

New York, May 13 (AP).—Trading in cocoa futures, except for liquidation purposes, will be suspended after the close of business Thursday until further notice by the board of managers of the New York Cocoa Exchange.

The board decided at a special meeting today to appoint a committee of five for voluntary liquidation.

Hendrickson Sees 'Squeeze' On Some Foods

By the Associated Press

Roy F. Hendrickson, agricultural marketing administrator, said yesterday a system of allocating some major food products for specific uses soon might become necessary to avert severe shortages in the future.

Such a system would apportion food supplies and agricultural raw materials among the armed forces, the United Nations receiving lend-lease assistance, American civilians and industrial users.

Addressing a conference of representatives of farmers, processors, distributors, retailers and shippers, Hendrickson said:

Allocations in Effect

"We are faced with a squeeze on our food supply. While from the standpoint of our total food supply no one should go hungry, we are almost certain to be up against some serious shortages of individual food items, and the sooner that is realized the better."

An allocations system—which does not involve rationing to the individual consumer—is already in effect, the administrator said, for canned goods to meet all Government requirements, including military and lend-lease needs.

"A voluntary system of allocations," he added, "is operating in connection with obtaining lend-lease supplies of pork and lard. The necessity for broadening and making allocations of pork and lard all-inclusive may not be so far off.

Fats and Oils Short

"In the field of fats and oils, in particular, no time should be lost in setting up a supply allocations system. Right now great quantities of fats and oils are finding their way into inedible uses. This flow will be regretted later when fats and oils become more urgently needed for food uses."

The conference considered plans for making full use of food supplies, particularly truck and other short seasonal crops which, because of their perishability, often go to waste.

Top-Grade Leaf Prices Show Drop On Md. Market

Baltimore, May 13 (AP).—Officials of the Maryland Tobacco Growers Association said today prices on medium and lower grades of tobacco on the Maryland market were "very satisfactory and fully up to last year" but prices for better grades were considerably below 1941.

The Maryland market, selling by both auction and hogshead lots, opened May 5 at about the same as last year, but an association spokesman said that "for some unknown reason" prices on the auction market fell May 6 about $7 from opening day.

Top prices a year ago were 48 to 49 cents per pound, opening the same this year, but falling the following day to 41 to 42 cents for best grades.

The market is slightly better now, the association said, with prices for best grades holding around 44 cents.

Utility Cuts Dividend

Chicago, May 13 (AP).—Directors of Middle West Corp., public utilities company, today declared a dividend of 10 cents a share, payable June 15 to stockholders of record May 29. Last year the company paid 20 cents a share in June and December.

Stocks React Sharply, Losing Fractions To 2 Points; Steel Issues Under Pressure

New York, May 13.—The stock market today met its sharpest reversal since the start of the belated spring upturn in the closing week of April.

There was enough selling to depress steels, aircrafts, farm equipments and other leaders fractions to around 2 points. Some of the chemicals and industrial specialties were pushed down 2 to 3. Most rails also finished with losses.

Associated with the moderate increase in offerings were ideas that the market's technical position called for some readjustment after the recent climb. Sentiment also seemed responsive to a dividend cut announced by Continental Can and German claims of heavy Russian casualties in the battle for the Kerch Peninsula.

The Associated Press 60-stock average was down .4 of a point, at 33.6 Of the 636 issues traded, 377 declined, 99 advanced and 160 were unchanged. Dealings of 336,980 shares were about the largest for the last week and compored with 249,200 yesterday.

Many new lows for a year or longer were recorded, including Bethlehem Steel, Republic, Jones & Laughlin, Boeing, Glenn Martin, United States Gypsum, Consolidated Oil, Philco, Savage Arms and Westinghouse Air Brake.

Among the principal losers were United States Steel, International Harvester, Douglas, Air Reduction, Westinghouse Electric, Dow Chemical, duPont, Union Carbide, Eastman Kodak and Monsanto Chemical.

There was considerable activity in Aviation Corp., Consolidated Oil and shares of General Gas & Electric. The last named company's convertible preferred dropped 20 points in odd lot transactions and the common dipped nine-sixteenths on a South Carolina Supreme Court decision prohibiting State purchase of two of the company's subsidiaries.

Bonds lost ground with stocks and commodities were mostly lower. Chicago wheat ended three-quarters to 1⅛ cents a bushel in arrears and corn gave up 1 to 1⅜ cents. Cotton futures finished 5 to 20 cents a bale ahead.

General Gas & Electric preferred B fell 18 points in the Curb . Also lower in this market were American Cyanamid, American Gas, Gulf Oil, New Jersey Zinc and Pennroad. Transactions here were 53,715 shares, against 53,680 Tuesday.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, May 13 (AP).—The grain market was in general retreat today, corn, rye and soybeans leading the decline.

Selling was blamed largely on favorable prospects for crops, suggesting that new surpluses would be piled upon old, aggravating the worst storage room scarcity situation in the memory of veteran grain men. Plans to stimulate consumption of grains that require most storage room in terminal markets, principally wheat, depressed the market.

Prices in all pits closed at or near the day's lows. Wheat was ¾-1⅛ lower than yesterday: May, 1.21; July, 1.23⅛; corn, ⅛-1⅛ down; May, 86; July, 89-88⅞; oats unchanged to ⅛ off; soybeans, 1⅜-2½ lower and rye, 1¾-2½ lower.

The market had to digest favorable weekly weather and crop reports as well as Washington news that the Senate Appropriations Subcommittee had approved legislation to permit the Government to sell up to 125 million bushels of wheat and unlimited stocks of corn for livestock feeding, provided that this would not depress corn prices below 85 per cent of parity. Some grain men thought this was bullish on the theory that sales could not be made at the present market since corn is below 85 per cent of parity.

Lyman Bryson, C. B. S. education director and chairman of Columbia's Adult Education Board, and Watson Davis, C. B. S. science expert, have just been cited for achievements in the fields of education and public service.

Bryson, who presides over the "People's Platform" forums, which you hear over WJSV every Thursday at 8:30 p. m., was cited for intellectual achievement and distinguished public service and was elected a founding member of the Phi Beta Kappa Associates. He won his original Phi Beta Kappa key on graduation from the University of Michigan in 1910.

Davis, who conducts Columbia's weekly "Adventures in Science" programs, heard over WJSV at 1:15 p. m. on Saturdays, and who is director of Science Service, received his award at the annual convention in Columbus, Ohio, of the American College Publicity Association for "distinguished service in the interpretation of higher education." He was cited for his "years of faithful interpretation of research in science."

The Phi Beta Kappa Associates, to which Bryson was elected, was founded two years ago, to cooperate with the United Chapters of Phi Beta Kappa in the development of a high caliber of American leadership. The group plans to promote a program aimed at increasing active interest in public affairs. Membership in the Associates, which now numbers 170, is limited to 200.

The citation to Bryson emphasized his work as chairman of Columbia's "People's Platform," the dinner-table forum over whose informal sessions Bryson has presided since its debut in July, 1938.

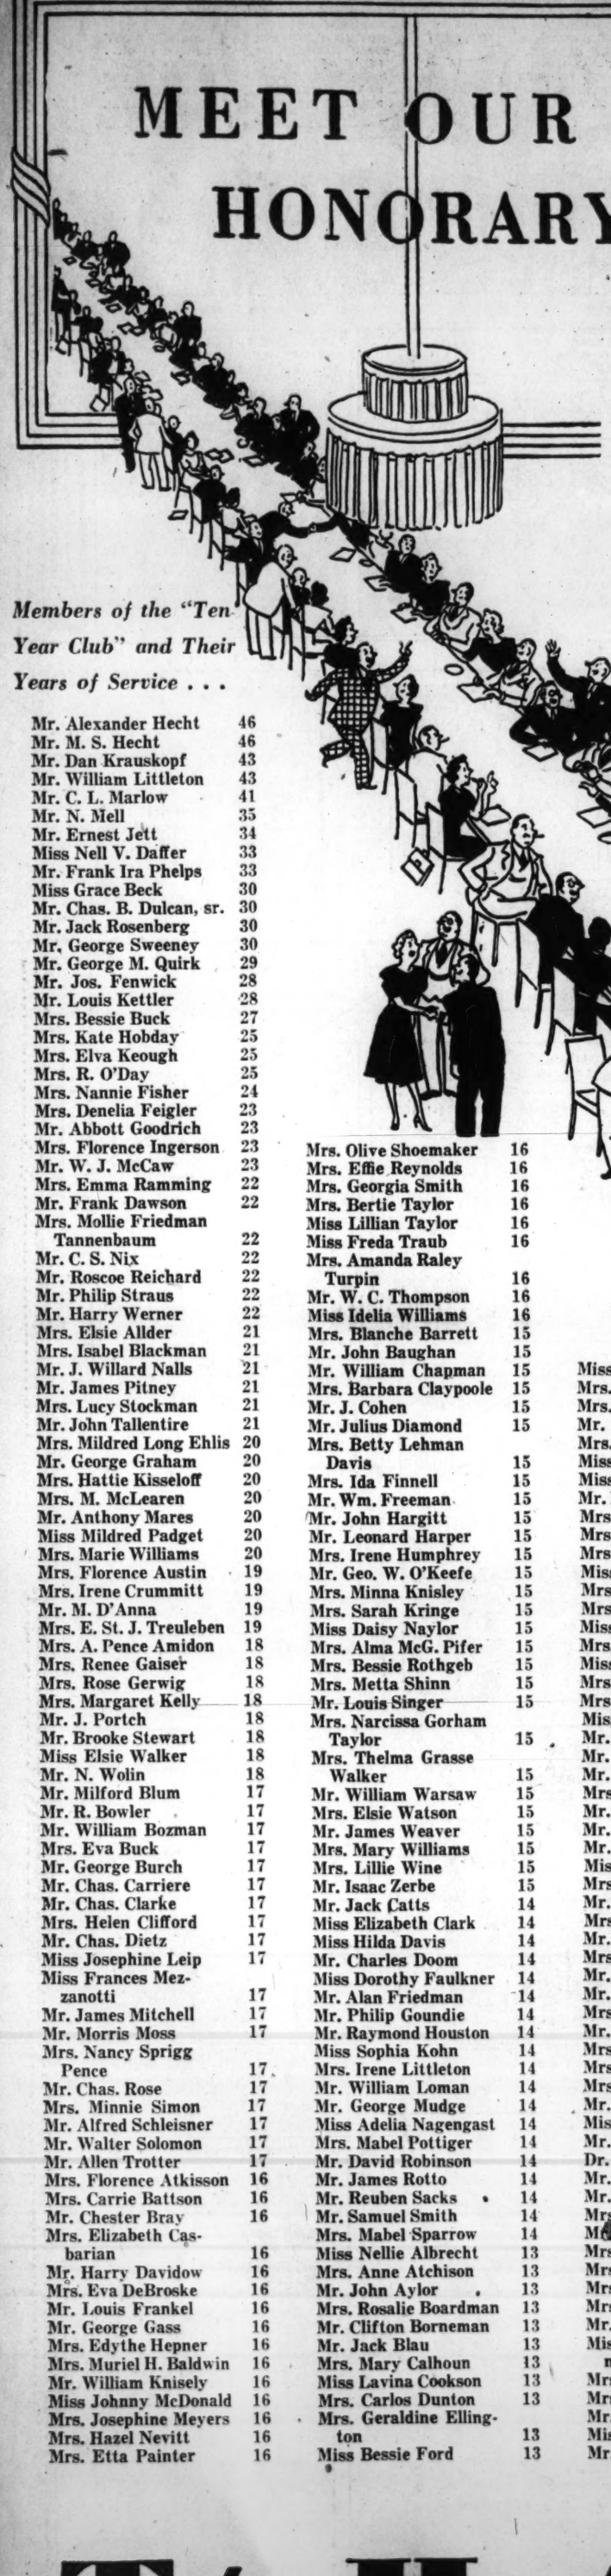
MEET OUR HONORARY BOARD OF DIRECTORS

IN OTHER WORDS, THE HUNDREDS OF VALUED VETERANS WHO FORM

The Hecht Co. "TEN to FIFTY YEAR CLUB"



TRUE, it would take a mighty big Conference Room to hold a Board of Directors as large as this and frequent meetings would be impractical . . . but day in and day out, there they are, a group of loyal, eager folks who've "grown up with the store" . . . veterans of 10 years to 46 years of service . . . a vital factor, a helpful guide to us in our daily consumer relations. Any wonder we call them our "Honorary Board of Directors" . . . that we turn to them for support in maintaining "The Store We Owe Our Customers!"

WE'VE over two thousand people in our store family . . . a sizable little army when you think about it. And we think about it often . . . especially at this time of year, when the members of our "Ten to Fifty Year Club" get together for their Annual Celebration. We're proud of these employees . . . of their achievements. Prouder still of the group spirit that has held them together as a happy family for so many years.

FOR this group spirit is the bulwark of this institution, a truly priceless ingredient that permeates not only this club, but the entire store. Not through accident or happenstance. It's born of a policy of "promoting from within," evidenced by the fact that 75% of all our executives, buyers, department service heads and assistants have come from the ranks. Beginners in this store can point to top executives who not only "started from scratch," but have never forgotten it.

IS it any wonder we consider them our Honorary Board of Directors . . . that we take their counsel in facilitating our service to you? For, of course, without YOU neither The Hect Co. nor the "Ten to Fifty Year Club" could exist. And so we speak for every employe listed on this page . . . for every worker at The Hecht Co. when we say YOUR loyal patronage and recognition is a source of daily inspiration in our service to the community.
